Return Trip. Nonstop
Miss Hurst's Marmoset
Lady in the Closet
Wheat and Corn

BY ARTHUR BRISBANE

FOURTEEN TIMES in the history of the world human beings have flown westward across the North Atlantic ocean. Eric Nelson and Lowell Smith were the first, and now come the brave French airmen, Dieudonne ("God Given") Coste and Maurice Bellonte.

Theirs is the first nonstop westward trip ever made.

Lindbergh's eastward flight ALONE with little announcement in advance, and the simple statement: "I am Charles Lindbergh," on arrival, will remain the most magnificent flight of all time.

NEXT PERHAPS will come the round trip.

Captain Hawks, now at the head of American fliers, having flown across the American continent in twelve and one-half hours, almost as far as Lindbergh and Coste and Bellonte flew in more than 30 hours, would be the man for the "New York to Paris and back again flight, with no stop between cities."

When he flies he really FLIES; 250 miles an hour is his idea of a reasonable gait.

At that rate he could make the trip to Paris in about 16 hours and back, allowing for head winds, in about 18 hours.

And even those figures, in years to come, will seem comically "old fashioned."

THE LITERARY and intelligent Fannie Hurst returns from Europe with a pet marmoset, so small, it sits in a large pocketbook. She could write about husbands of the future, who will probably dwindle to about that size in the course of evolution.

The giant sea crab, when you catch one, is always a female, of great size.

She carries the male crab, about as big as a 10-cent piece, under one of her flippers, except on rare occasions. Human husbands may dwindle down to that, when men have no harder work to do than pushing a button. Size and muscle will no longer count.

But woman will remain of full size because of her maternal duties, and for other reasons. The female spider is 10 times as big as her husband, and eats him after marriage. Human husbands should not complain.

THE INTERESTING charge is made that representatives of the Nye Senate committee, investigating Mrs. McCormick's campaign expenses, gave good government money to bribe a detective hired by Mrs. McCormick.

This does not seem to be playing the game fairly. Each side should respect the other's detectives.

Also Mrs. McCormick's head detective says a lady was "planted" in the closet of Mrs. McCormick's Drake Hotel apartment to listen and report. Some Republicans of importance tell you privately "Mrs. McCormick, even if elected, will never enter the senate." Illinois will want to know about that.

THE UNBELIEVABLE happens. You will read this morning that wheat for September delivery sells in Chicago at 82½ cents a bushel, and September corn at 97¾ cents. No board of trade speculator, no

Coste and Bellonte Speeding to Dallas

QUESTION MARK CROSSES OHIO IN TRIP WEST

French Aviators Due in Texas This Afternoon in Flight for $25,000 Prize.

TAKE OFF AT EARLY HOUR

Hope To Arrive at Goal in Nine or Ten Hours; Take 1,600-Mile Route.

By The Associated Press

Speeding southwestward across the eastern half of the United States, France's two heroes of the Paris-New York flight were well into the second half of their nonstop $25,000 flight to Dallas this afternoon.

Dieudonne Coste and Maurice Bellonte passed the half way mark in their "?" a little more than five hours after their take-off from New York at 6:55 (Marion time) this morning and at 1:20 p. m. after six and a half hours of flight, they were reported over Paducah, Ky., with about 950 miles of their 1,600-mile flight behind them.

The plane zoomed away from Curtiss field today at 6:55 a. m. with the morning sun at 6:55 a. m. with the morning sun at its tail, and winked across the Alleghany mountains, the worst stretch of their route, at a 130-mile-an-hour rate, passing over Allentown, Pa., at 7:45, over Edensburg at 8:45, and over Pittsburgh at 9:45.

Almost three hours to the minute after the take-off the plane was passing the Pennsylvania-Ohio line with clear weather ahead and a good chance to gain speed.

Coste hoped before starting to make the New York-Dallas flight in nine or ten hours. It is about 1,400 miles by air line but a little more than 1,600 by the Pittsburgh-Cincinnati-Little Rock route to which Coste intended to adhere.

Preceded by Business Manager

Nine minutes before the trans-Atlantic plane took the air, another ship hopped off with Rene Racover, Coste's American representative, who planned to attend to the trans-Atlantic fliers' business affairs in connection with collecting the Easterwood prize of $25,000 which was offered for the first flight from Paris to Dallas with New York as the only intermediary stop.

PLANE SEEN HERE NOT COSTE'S SHIP

A large plane which passed over Marion today at about 10:15 a. m., was mistaken by many citizens for the Question Mark which left New York City early this morning enroute to Dallas, Tex. The Question Mark passed over Pittsburgh at 9:45 a. m., according to official reports.

The Question Mark followed a course far south of Marion.

Man Refused Liquor Slays Ohioan at Home

By Brush-Moore Leased Wire

STEUBENVILLE, O., Sept. 4—Jefferson county authorities today were hunting a disgruntled liquor buyer who shot and killed Louie Makrio, 40, a Hungarian, who resides at Pleasant Station, 15 miles southwest of here, last night when Makrio refused the man's request for liquor.

Makrio's wife, who witnessed the shooting, was unable to give police an accurate description of the slayer.

According to her, the man walked up to the house and, when Makrio answered the door, said he wanted to buy some liquor. When Makrio replied that he didn't have any, the man raised a shotgun and fired at close range.

Makrio died instantly. A post-mortem showed 12 slugs had penetrated his chest.

Farm Board Leader on Radio Program Tonight

By International News Service

WASHINGTON, Sept. 4—Alexander H. Legge, chairman of the Federal farm board, will speak over the radio tonight. He will explain in detail the activities of his board and the efforts of the federal government to aid farmers who have been financially affected by the recent drouth, and to generally improve agriculture as an industry.

His speech will be broadcast over a national hookup of the Columbia Broadcasting company.

LUNG-POWER RUNS NEW LIGHT

Inventor Devises Electric Lamp That Can Be Blown Out.

BY HOWARD W. BLAKESLEE
Associated Press Science Editor

NEW YORK, Sept. 4—The old jokes about lazy folks who work merely by drawing their breath today became the latest reality of scientific developments to reduce man's physical toil.

An electric light which can be blown out with the same small puff that extinguishes a match was placed on exhibition at the Westinghouse Lighting institute here.

Its secret is a new kind of electric switch, the "breath relay," for which is promised many useful applications. It can be set to turn either on or off.

It gives man a third "hand" for some kinds of mechanical operations, and a substitute for hands in cases where he wishes to avoid direct touch.

Better Than Expected

The latter purpose was the object of the inventor, Dr. E. E. Free of New York, consulting engineer, but when the device was perfected by the Westinghouse company it proved to be unexpectedly reliable and not greatly subject to operation by vagrant breezes.

The company says it can be used for safety devices and for the operator's control of automobiles, airplanes, scientific apparatus, punch-presses and other machines in which hands and feet are busy. It can also be made to actuate devices that open service doors of restaurants, and to operate the carriages of typewriters and billing machines. It is even claimed that the breath device

NYE INQUIRY TO CONTINUE

Answers Mrs. McCormick as Sessions Are Adjourned to Sept. 15.

By The Associated Press

CHICAGO, Sept. 4—Senator Gerald P. Nye's answer to the challenge of Congresswoman Ruth Hanna McCormick: "What are you going to do about my employment of detectives to investigate you and the United States senate investigating committee?" is that he is going to keep right on investigating.

"The committee," said the North Dakota senator in a statement last night, "will not be diverted from its clearly defined duty by any smoke screen laid down through a will to threaten, intimidate and influence."

Senator Is "Amazed"

The senator said he had been "amazed to read the statement of this candidate in which guilt of such employment (of detectives) was admitted."

Senators Nye and Porter H. Dale of Vermont, the two committee members who have been hearing witnesses here for the past two days, adjourned sessions late yesterday until Sept. 15, at which time the other committee members are expected to be here. At that time the committee expects to pursue its inquiry into Mrs. McCormick's use of detectives to investigate the committee members and committee employes.

The methods employed by the McCormick detectives were scored

BANDIT KILLED DURING GAS STATION HOLDUP

Two Others Believed Wounded by Owner of Hobson, O., Station.

By The Associated Press

POMEROY, O., Sept. 4—One bandit was killed and two others were believed to have been wounded early today at Hobson, near here, when W. R. Athey, 45, gasoline filling station owner, opened fire upon the trio after they had robbed him.

The three bandits, one carrying a pistol, first purchased some gas from Athey. They then followed him into his station, and pushed him upon the cot where he slept. One of the men took all the cash from his pockets. As Athey fell on the cot he reached under the pillow, grasped a pistol, and opened fire. The one bandit was killed. The unarmed robber was standing between Athey and the armed bandit, and the latter did not return the fire as the men fled from the station.

The dead bandit, unidentifed, was aged about 30 years. He had two pistols and 52 cartridges in his pockets.

It is believed the same men held up the Tuppers Plains filling station near here several nights ago. They were fired on by the owner of the station but escaped.

IT'S POOR FERTILIZER

SILVER SPRINGS, Md., Sept. 4—Joseph Huston, 43, and Raymond Huston, 18, his son, were held today on a charge of selling sawdust to residents of Montgomery county for fertilizer. The specific charge against them is obtaining money under false representation.

80TH FAIR PROGRAM NEARS COMPLETION

Rodeo Booked as One of Extra Attractions; Admission Price Cut to 35 Cents.

One of the most attractive programs in the history of the county awaits fair fans next week when the eightieth annual exposition of the Marion County Agricultural Society gets under way.

From the first crack of the gun Tuesday morning until the finish Friday night thousands of persons will be almost continuously entertained in what a determined board has planned to make the biggest fair the county has seen.

A rodeo, booked as one of the greatest drawing cards of the week, will arrive here Saturday or Sunday from the Michigan state fair to entertain fair crowds Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday nights in front of the grandstand. Short features will be given by the rodeo between heats of afternoon races Wednesday, Thursday and Friday.

Night Programs Planned

The rodeo will present two-hour programs each night of the fair beginning at 8 p. m. This feature will supplant fireworks and pageants which have furnished entertainment for previous night fairs.

Admission to the grounds has been fixed at 35 cents, both day and night, while seats in the grand stand will cost but 25 cents at all times. No charge will be made to admit automobiles to the grounds. Parking will be in charge of Boy Scouts.

A speed program which promises to top all previous fair races in the number of horses is expected to attract 150 horses, according to Secretary Carl Sifritt.

Lively interest has already been displayed in exhibits. Offices will be maintained in the county health office in the basement of the courthouse until Saturday at 8 p .m. for exhibitors to enter their lists. More than a score of exhibitors had en-

WOMEN'S ENDURANCE RECORD SHATTERED

Mlle. Maryse Bastie Remains in Air for 38 Hours Over Paris.

By The Associated Press

PARIS, Sept. 4 — Mlle. Maryse Bastie, French woman aviator, today broke the world's women's endurance record for sustained flight. She landed at 9:31 a. m. after exactly 38 hours aloft.

Her mark was two hours, thirteen minutes and five seconds better than that of Lena Bernstein, made May 2, of 35 hours, 46 minutes and 55 seconds. Mlle. Bastie previously had held the record at 27 hours sustained flight.

After she had broken the record this morning Mlle. Bastie dropped a note saying that she expected to remain up two hours longer.

LOCAL MAN ESCAPES FROM PRISON FARM

Homer Needles, Convicted in Chicken Theft, Leaves Honor Camp.

Homer Needles, a convict at the London prison farm, escaped from the honor camp on Aug. 30, it became known today according to the Associated Press. Needles, 35, was serving one to seven years for grand larceny. He was sent up from Marion county on Jan. 18, 1930.

Prison authorities said Needles was "badly wanted," and that they had sent out circulars to police authorities over a wide area in the hope that he would be picked up. The regulation $50 reward for his capture was offered.

Needles was sentenced to one to seven years in the penitentiary on a charge of grand laceny following the perpetration of a number of chicken thefts in the southern part of the county late last year. He was also wanted on a charge of issuing a questionable check at the time of his arrest.

He was taken into custody by local officers at Springfield late last year.

POSSES SCOUR OHIO AREA FOR TWO FUGITIVES

Heavily Wooded Sections Near Lancaster Scene of Convict Hunt.

ONE OF TRIO CAPTURED

Guard Maintained During Night Around Timber Land Near Pleasantville.

By The Associated Press

LANCASTER, O., Sept. 4 — Heavily armed posses continued to comb this area today for two convicts still at liberty after escaping with a third prisoner from the Ohio penitentiary brick plant at Junction City yesterday.

Searchers roved through wooded sections in the vicinity of Pleasantville and Pickerington. Franklin county deputy sheriffs joined the hunt when a prowler was seen early today near Canal Winchester, southeast of Columbus.

The man disappeared into a cornfield when Marshal T. W. Glick, leading a party of searchers, fired twice. It was believed he was one of the convicts, indicating they might be making their way to Columbus.

Guard Woods During Night

Throughout the night a cordon of men was kept around the Kramer woods, near Pleasantville, on the chance that the hunted men were still hiding in the timber.

The two convicts still at large when Ben Caddes, 26, sentenced from Lucas county to serve five to 12 years on a statutory charge, and Clyde Fisher, 32, sentenced from Trumbull county to five to 20 years for an automobile theft.

The third man who escaped, Lee Neddleton, 20, of Lucas county, was captured in a straw patch near Pleasantville yesterday by M. A. Hanna. Neddleton, serving two to 15 years for burglary and larceny, was returned to the prison plant last night.

Guards Overpowered

The trio made their break for freedom after overpowering two guards whom they disarmed and fled in an employe's automobile. The car was abandoned at Pleasantville and the convicts, reported armed with pistols, rifles and a shotgun, ran into a woods.

Neddleton was armed with a rifle he had wrested from one of the prison guards, but failed to offer resistance.

IDENTIFIED IN HOLDUP

Two Fugitives Believed To Have Robbed Filling Station.

By International News Service

MARIETTA, O., Sept 4—F. S. Bishop, gasoline station attendant of Mile Run junction, a few miles west of here, today identified pictures of Lee Heddleston and Ben Caddes, escaped convicts of the Junction City brick plant, as two of the three bandits who held him up and robbed him at his station last night.

Washington county authorities expressed the belief that the trio which robbed Bishop is the same as that which attempted a holdup at a gasoline station at Hobson, near Pomeroy, early this morning. One of the trio was fatally shot by W. R. Athey, the owner of the station.

Bishop, accompanied by Sheriff Way, left for Pomeroy shortly before noon in an effort to identify the slain bandit. Bishop said that the robber trio fired several shots at him as they drove away after looting the cash drawer. None of the bullets was effective.

MARION LOSES M. E. MEETING

Ohio District 1931 Conference To Be Held in Columbus Church.

Marion Methodists lost an opportunity to be hosts to the 1931 Ohio Methodist Episcopal conference when a vote taken today at the conference in Oxford, favored Columbus by 237 to 195. The King Avenue M. E. church in Columbus will be the scene of next year's meeting of the conference.

Marion delegates were making a strong bid for the 1931 conference which would have climaxed a centennial celebration of Methodism in this city. Epworth M. E. church would have been the host church.

The annual Ohio conference reached one of its most important sessions today as delegates began consideration of church policies, according to an Associated Press dispatch.

The deliberations were expected to lead up to the prohibition question tomorrow.

The liquor question was brought up last night in an address by President G. Bromley Oxnam of DePauw university, who took the stand that it is not enough to support a candidate for public office merely because he is dry.

A wet candidate may be preferable to a prohibition enforcement advocate if he is better qualified otherwise, Dr. Oxnam asserted, "It is not right to back the anti-saloon candidate if his only qualification is that he is a dry," he said.

Trial of Russell H. Bready, former pastor of the Methodist Trinity church at Cincinnati, was under way today. He is charged with misappropriation of funds. The Rev. S. R. Dunham of Oxford, acted as prosecutor.

The conference relations committee permitted F. E. Reddick, former pastor at Huntsville, to surrender his credentials and to withdraw from the ministry under complaint. He recently was arrested on charges of blackmail.

Big Day

Will Rogers Special

TAHOE TAVERN, Calif., Sept. 4—It was a historical day for France Tuesday. They flew the ocean and run W. R. Hearst out of their country.

That was a pretty cute statement he handed 'em back, but it will be lost on 'em. Frenchmen individually have plenty of humor, but as a government they take everything mighty serious. There is nothing can be as funny or as little as a nation when it tries to get back at somebody.

If every country run him out for publishing something they didn't want published, we would have had him exiled at birth, and he would now be residing in Siberia.

CITY LEFT IN RUINS BY GALE

Santo Domingo Said To Be Mass of Wreckage.

HUNDREDS INJURED

Extent of Horror Becomes Known as Communication Is Restored.

BULLETIN

By International News Service

MIAMI, Fla., Sept. 4—The tropical hurricane which devastated the city of Santo Domingo is now central on the northwestern tip of Haiti, moving north-northwest toward the Florida straits, Richard W. Gray, United States meteorologist here, announced today. Although the storm passed over a mountainous region during the night it still is of hurricane force, Gray said. He expressed the belief that the hurricane would change its course late today, and would not reach the Florida coast before tomorrow night.

NEW YORK, Sept. 4—Three hundred persons have been killed and 900 injured in the tropical hurricane which tore through the center of the city of Santo Domingo, according to an estimate made today by the All America Cables company from radio messages received from the scene of the devastation.

The capital city of the ill-fated island was reported as "practically destroyed" with buildings crumpled and debris strewn over the highways and countryside.

The core of the hurrican apparently struck the city squarely, crushing structures and flipping lighter buildings into splinters.

Trees were spun into the air-like toothpicks and the government radio towers were blown down delaying communication of the disaster to the outside world by many hours.

Adding to the terror and confusion of the populace was the over-running of the streets by scores of mad men who escaped from the city's insane asylum.

The hurrican cracked down the insane asylum and the inmates not killed or injured ran screaming through the city.

Part of the bridge spanning the river in the center of the town was blasted away by the giant wind storm.

Half a dozen steamships, plying between north, central and south American ports, were reported to be in the hurricane area, either in the Gulf of Mexico or the Caribbean sea.

Food Supplies Gone

The inhabitants of the city were reported suffering from hunger.

Red Cross Gets Request for Aid

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON, Sept. 4 — The Red Cross acted immediately today to aid the suffering in Santo Domingo on receipt of a plea from President Rafael L. Trujillo, of the Dominican republic.

Fifteen thousand dollars was cabled to American Minister Curtiss as "an initial appropriation for the emergency." Captain Antonio Silva, manager of the Porto Rican chapter of the Red Cross, was ordered to go by air from San Juan to the scene of devastation.

He can cover the distance in one hour and a half. A report from him is expected late today. He is to make a survey and take charge of first relief activities.

Silva bore much of the responsibility in disaster relief provided by the Red Cross in his own country after the 1928 hurricane there. It was found at that time that it was impractical to send in relief commodities. For this reason, officials decided today to send the cash.

The capital of the Dominican republic, a city of nearly 50,000 population, was laid waste by the storm, which swept westward through the Greater Antilles during the last 24 hours. Not until midday was communication restored with the stricken city when all-America cables improvised a station in the Island city by which first details of the horror began to reach the world.

The wind mounted to 160 miles an hour during the climax of the hurricane. Leaving a trail of ruin and almost sinking the Porto Rico line steamship Coamo the storm lashed its way toward Cuba and the Florida straits, but, latest advices said, swerved sharply northward, apparently passing out to sea and sparing lands further to the west.

August Brings Weather Of Nearly All Varieties

Hodge podge, chop suey, chili con carne, anything that means a variety of the unexpected and the month of August is explained.

Last month was ideal for the grumblers when "some time like it hot and some like it cold,'" for the thermometer leaped to 97 on Aug. 5 and slid down to 49 on the night of Aug. 12.

Most any night there were family grumblings if there wasn't an extra comforter at the foot of the bed to pull up when the temperature began to fall in the early morning hours.

Rains 2.31 Inches

Rainfall, or precipitation as those who stick to technicalities when speaking of weather would say, wasn't all that it could have been, registering only 2.31 inches. The average precipitation for the month is officially recorded as 3.13 inches.

The highest rainfall was on Aug. 31, when 1.06 inches fell Sunday and early Monday morning, rather spoiling a good Sunday holiday, but pleasing the farmers.

The average temperature for Marion in the month is 71.6. Rapid calculation with an adding machine and two columns of figures gave the unofficial average for Marion for that month, this year as 73.

Persons who have checked Marion temperatures in past years will find that in 1918 in the month of August, a heat of 104 degrees was recorded. The highest registered last month was 97. The lowest maximum temperature was 72 on Aug. 23.

Some days the townspeople arose and planned vacations, heartened by a clear sky and a bright sun. By noon, when the travelers were ready to start, the sun was overshadowed by dark clouds and the atmosphere conducive to one of those "gray" days. There were 14 partly cloudy days in the month, and only six that weren't foolers and remained clear all day long, much to the enjoyment of those who revel in sunshine and the high spirits that a bright day generally brings.

Of dark, cloudy days, with no sparkle of sun or bright blue sky and white clouds, there were 11 last month.

From one day to the next no no one was sure just what to expect on the following day, and the month was one of surprises, sometimes pleasant and sometimes disappointing.

PLAN LAST RITES

Services for W. D. Cooper To Be Held Friday at 2 p. m.

Rev. S. S. Hardy, rector of St. Paul's Episcopal church will conduct the funeral services of William D. Cooper Friday at 2 p. m. at the Cooper home at 317 West Columbia street. The body was removed to the home from the W. C. Boyd funeral home on South Main street today at 10 a. m. and may be viewed there tonight and until funeral time. Interment will be in Marion cemetery.

Mr. Cooper retired in November last year, after 45 years with the Erie railroad company, the last several years as engineer on a passenger train between Marion and Dayton. He is survived by his widow, four children, a brother and three sisters.

O. W. U. PROFESSOR TO ADDRESS MIMES

R. C. Hunter, Instructor of Dramatics, To Be Guest Speaker Friday.

Prof. R. C. Hunter, head of the department of dramatics at Ohio Wesleyan university, will be the guest speaker of the Marion Mimes at a meeting of members Friday at 7:30 p. m. at the Mimes room at 140½ South Main street.

Acting and directing will be the two phases of the dramatic field on which Mr. Hunter will speak

The Mimes board has urged that all members, especially those interested as active members, be present for the meeting. The gathering Friday night will be the first opportunity the active members of the play house group has had to meet and become acquainted and to know those on the board who are chairman of various departments of the Mimes.

Rehearsals are under way each night at the studio for the first production of the season to be presented Sept. 23. A three act play will be given. Rehearsals will be suspended Friday night, however, that the director, those in the cast and those assisting in its production may hear Mr. Hunter.

Distinguished Committee of 17 Reveals New Discovery

Mrs. James J. Davis, Ethel Barrymore, Anne Morgan, Mary Roberts Rinehart, members of Committee to view tests of new product in action

MME. ERNESTINE SCHUMANN-HEINK. America's most widely known and best loved prima donna. One of the celebrated women whose interest was captured by this new form of soap.

A COMMITTEE of 17 of America's most distinguished women were honor guests recently at the dramatic demonstration of a new soap for washing fine fabrics.

At the close, the consensus of opinion was that for the first time in many years a totally new kind of soap had been invented which would revolutionize the laundering of delicate things.

A distinguished gathering

Never before has there been a meeting of prominent women to "prejudge" a product made for women. It was felt that such women as Mrs. Franklin Roosevelt, Miss Anne Morgan, Ethel Barrymore, Mary Roberts Rinehart, would be representative of other women in the class each represented.

Made of olive and palm oils

In telling of his creation the inventor said he considered the most important feature to be that it is made of olive and palm oils instead of tallow. "For years," he said, "the finest beauty soaps have been of olive and palm oil base. Obviously what cannot injure lovely complexions cannot harm fragile materials nor redden and roughen women's hands."

The other revolutionary feature, according to its discoverer, is the fact that the new soap is in the form of tiny hollow beads. The instant these beads touch water they dissolve. This not only saves time, but it protects fabrics from the harmful action of undissolved soap particles which usually remain after the most thorough rinsing where ordinary chips or flakes are used. As these bits of soap are ironed into stockings, lingerie, etc., "soap rot" results, with stains and faded spots.

Famous Silk Manufacturers

unite with Committee of 17 in endorsing Palmolive Beads

CHENEY — LUXITE
CORTICELLI — PHOENIX
HOLEPROOF — STEHLI
KAYSER — VANITY FAIR
VAN RAALTE

The above manufacturers analyzed Palmolive Beads in their own laboratories. They tested them again and again in washing tests on the silks which they manufacture. And now all of them recommend Palmolive Beads for safe washing of silks.

Dr. McGowan, Antoinette Donnelly, Suzanne Pollard, Lillian Edgerton and Nellie Taylor Ross watch the new soap dissolve in interesting tests.

Dissolve instantly —rinse completely

The new "Beads" dissolve so thoroughly, so completely, that rinsing in one water leaves materials entirely soap free. They dissolve in water 20 degrees cooler than ordinary soaps require. Reports received from the country's greatest silk manufacturers, who had previously tested the new soap, stressed the tremendous advantage of these two factors in washing delicate silks.

"The name of the new soap, 'Palmolive Beads,' reveals the secret of why this new soap gives such vastly better results," said chemists who had helped create this discovery.

Large box 10c

Palmolive Beads are the first soap for fine silks ever made in the form of tiny, hollow, instantly dissolving "beads." The only fine fabric soap ever to be made of olive and palm oils.

Palmolive Beads are for sale everywhere at 10 cents the box —no more than you pay for ordinary flakes and chips. Get a box today.

Who's Who on the Committee of 17

REPUBLICANS PLAN MEETING

J. W. Philp, Assistant Postmaster General, To Be Chief Speaker Here.

John W. Philp, fourth assistant postmaster general, has been obtained as speaker for a Republican dinner at Hotel Harding, Friday night, Sept. 12, Paul D. Michel, president of the Marion county Republican club announced today.

Mr. Philp was booked to appear here largely through the efforts of Postmaster French Crow. Mr. Philp was appointed postmaster at Dallas, Tex., by the late President Harding and was elevated to the office of fourth assistant postmaster general by President Hoover. He is a pastmaster of the national postmasters' association, and an ardent booster of aviation and the use of air handling of mail.

He will come to Marion after inspecting a proposed site for a new postoffice at Bucyrus, a task that falls under his department.

Nearly 150 persons from this district are expected at the meeting. Congressman Grant E. Mouser Jr. will probably appear on the program for a short talk. Mrs. H. K. Henderson, president of the Marion chapter, Republican Women's council, will be in charge of the meeting. President Michel will preside.

The dinner will begin promptly at 7 p. m. Tickets may be obtained in advance from President Michel.

HARVEY STATION HEARING SEPT. 9

Residents Protest Abandonment of Pennsy Stop North of Marion.

Hearing on the request of the Pennsylvania railroad to abandon Harvey station, north of Marion has been set for Tuesday, Sept. 9, at 10 a. m., by the public utilities commission of Ohio. The Commission was asked recently by the railroad to allow the discontinuance of Harvey station. A large number of residents of near the station protested against the granting of the request.

The protest by the residents was based on the contention that to discontinue service at that point would be to deprive them of any convenient railroad outlet.

The hearing will be held in the offices of the commission in Columbus.

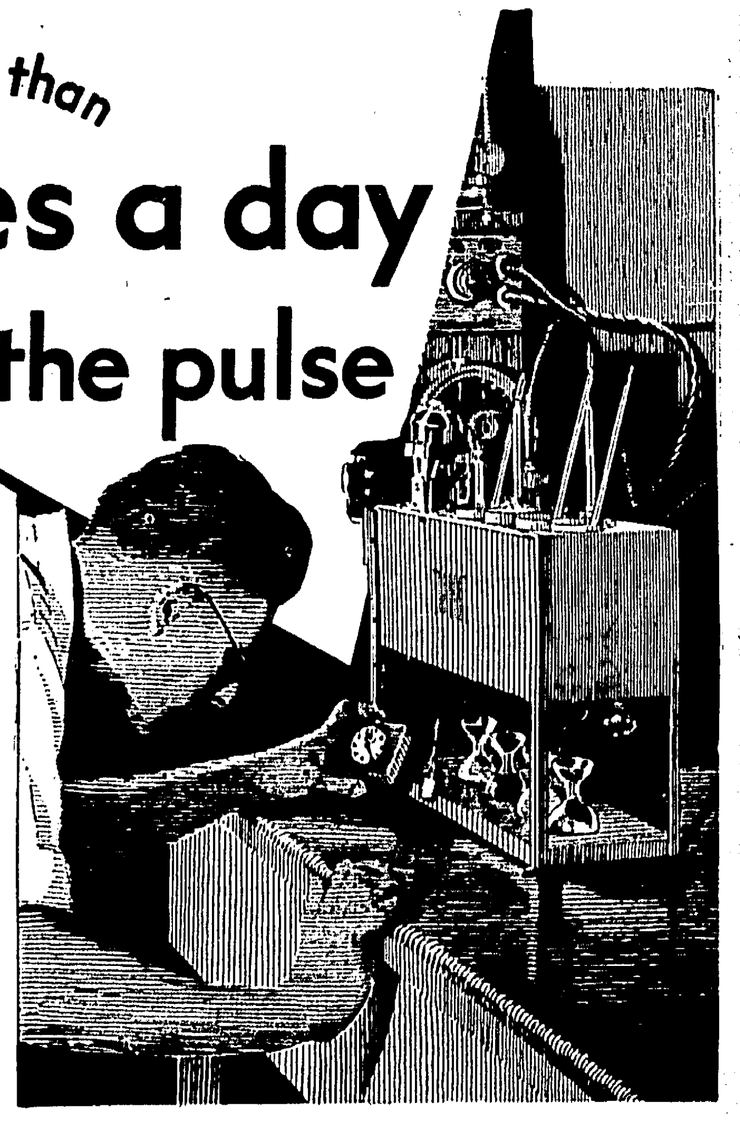
More than 50 times a day they take the pulse



. . . of New Sohio Motor Oil to make certain of its controlled viscosity

What! Still another test of New Sohio Motor Oil? Absolutely! And you can't buy a single quart of this great all-weather oil which hasn't registered a "normal pulse" under the alert eye of the man with the stop-watch.

From every batch of New Sohio that comes out of the refinery a sample is taken . . . between 50 and 60 samples a day. Into the Viscosimeter it goes, a specially designed instrument which measures with split-second accuracy the "speed of flow" at specific temperatures. The slightest variation from New Sohio's exacting viscosity standards is at once noted and corrected before the oil is passed for shipment.

That is typical of the painstaking methods which enable Standard of Ohio's lubrication engineers to control the viscosity or body of New Sohio Motor Oil. This controlled viscosity means that, summer or winter, you get these advantages when you use New Sohio:

TOUGH BODY—stands up under the strain and heat of modern high-speed motor operation.

FLEXIBLE BODY—positive lubrication in summer heat or winter cold.

SMOOTH BODY—an oilier oil, free from non-lubricating wax . . . provides perfect piston seal and prevents loss of power.

PURE BODY—contains the very minimum of carbon-forming elements.

It takes but a few minutes to have the old oil drained and your crankcase freshly filled with smooth, cool, tough New Sohio Motor Oil. You'll find it makes a difference . . . and it lasts longer. Try it!

TEACHERS WILL HOLD 3 MEETS

First Sessions of School Year Planned by Morrow County Superintendent.

Special To The Star

MT. GILEAD, Sept. 4—Three teachers' meetings will be held this month in Mt. Gilead, County Superintendent H. C. Hanna announces. The first is a meeting of all the high school teachers, approximately 65, at the Globe hotel Sept. 17. After a banquet at 6:30 there will be addresses on various phases of education by Gov. Myers Y. Cooper, Grant E. Mouser, Jr., of Marion, and Carl Smith of Kenton. Music for the evening will be furnished by a number of the teachers.

The second meeting is for the one-room rural school teachers. It will be held Sept. 26 at the Mt. Gilead high school. All the rural schools will be dismissed for the day. The 37 teachers will spend the day visiting the Mt. Gilead grades. The day is known as the first county visitation day of the school year.

At this meeting the following specialists will deliver addresses: Mrs. Helene Stalter of Bowling Green, reading; Miss Laninger of Payne, reading; Miss Florence Fisher of Columbus, writing; Miss Mildred Kerr of Mt. Gilead, art, and Mrs. Howard Evans of Galion, music.

The third meeting is for all the teachers in the county. It is the first bi-monthly and will be held at Mt. Gilead in the high school building Sept. 27. Speakers for the meeting will include: Dr. D. H. Eikenberry, guidance director, state department of education; B. A. Auhinbaugh, visual education director, state department of education, and Mrs. Helene Stalter of Bowling Green, reading specialist.

Archaeology Discovery Made by Boy Scouts

By The Associated Press

MEXICO CITY, Sept. 4—The department of education announced today that Boy Scouts had discovered a new archaeological zone in the wilds of the state of Guerrero. Among the figures discovered is a large stone sphinx bearing a marked resemblance to that in Egypt.

Government archaeologists are leaving forthwith to study the zone, which according to preliminary reports probably includes an entire buried city. A number of hills in the zone are believed to cover pyramids.

AIMEE GUARDED

Mother Threatens Kidnaping of Church Leader, Is Rumor

By International News Service

LOS ANGELES, Calif., Sept. 4—Two burly policemen continued today to stand guard before the beach cottage where Aimee Semple McPherson, famed evangelist, is recovering from an asserted nervous collapse.

The guard was provided by the police department in response to a request by Mrs. McPherson's followers who charged that Mrs. Minnie Kennedy, the evangelist's mother, had threatened to kidnap her.

Alleging that her daughter is, in reality, recovering from a face-lifting operation, Mrs. Kennedy admitted she hired some men to "persuade" Mrs. McPherson to move from the beach house to a hospital.

WORSHIP STANDARDS SUBJECT OF SERMON

"Mere Form Carries No Weight," Rev. R. H. Nicodemus Says at Church.

The standards of life as related to worship were discussed by Rev. R. H. Nicodemus in his sermon last night at the First Church of the Brethren. "Real life was never lived only in Jesus' way," according to Rev. Nicodemus.

In his sermon he said: "The gift of God is creative of goodness and character. There is no fortification against the evils of life except that inward fortification given by God and accepted by man, which is the vitalizing agency which quickens human faculties and moves them to their highest possibilities.

"Worship that is not according to knowledge and proper identification with righteousness, is not worship at all. Mere form in worship carries no weight with God. It is the spirit in which one worships that makes it a valuable act."

Tonight he will speak on "The Claims of Jesus Christ in His Ministry." Old songs will be sung tonight and Rev. G. G. Canfield, pastor, will offer a special musical program.

Two Die in Automobile Wreck Near Lancaster

By The Associated Press.

LANCASTER, O., Sept. 4—The death toll as a result of an automobile wreck at Carroll, near here, last night was increased to two today when Wayne K. Sheppard, 48, succumbed in a hospital of a fractured skull. Mrs. J. D. Buckley, his companion in the machine, sustained a broken neck, and was dead when she reached the hospital. Their car failed to make a turn at the Carroll crossing on the Columbus pike and smashed into a pole.

Mrs. Buckley is survived by the widower, an insurance man of Parkersburg, W. Va., while Sheppard is survived by his widow and one daughter, Virginia.

FRENCH FLIERS MAY TOUR UNITED STATES

Coste and Bellonte Scheduled To Make Good-Will Flight.

By International News Service

NEW YORK, Sept. 4—Captain Dieudonne Coste and Maurice Bellonte, who conquered the Atlantic in a Paris to New York flight, probably will make a six weeks good-will flight around the United States, it was learned today. Plans for the proposed flight are still indefinite and may not be announced until the fliers return here from their flight to Dallas, Texas, in their plane, Question Mark. The same plane will be used in the good-will tour.

Leaders in industry, government and aviation will unite in sponsoring the round-the-nation trip of the French aviators and the tour will be financed by private subscription.

Ambassador Dwight W. Morrow, it was learned, declined the chairmanship of the committee arranging the tour but from Mexico City he advised that he would cooperate with the committee and was understood to have pledged financial support to the project.

Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh will be a member of the committee and assist in mapping the itinerary. He declined today to comment on the flight and said he did not know what sections of the country it would include.

Fliers to Place Wreath on Grave of Former Ambassador

By The Associated Press

CLEVELAND, O., Sept. 4—Captain Dieudonne Coste and Maurice Bellonte, the French trans-Atlantic fliers, will come to Cleveland to place a wreath on the grave of Ambassador Myron T. Herrick, it was announced today by the Cleveland Advertising club.

Officials of the club said the fliers agreed to come here as part of a prospective good-will tour. Arrangements were made by long-distance telephone last night.

Herrick, known as the "beloved ambassador" during his long stay in Paris, was a close friend of Capt. Coste.

State May Eliminate Country Stop Lights

By The Associated Press

COLUMBUS, O., Sept. 4—The state highway department today announced it anticipated a survey of Ohio highways where automatic traffic lights are operated, with a view to eliminating lights that tend to impede traffic.

While holding that the traffic light, in its right place, is a good thing, the department contends that "either because of high pressure salesmanship or that potent power of suggestion, a delusion of grandeur, almost every cross-road, hamlet, village and town installed a light where it was neither ornate nor useful."

CHEAPER GAS OFFER OF NEW COMPANY

Akron Interests Would Use Hardin County Fields To Supply Kenton Consumers.

Special To The Star

KENTON, Sept. 4—A lower rate for gas consumers of Kenton was offered last night when representatives of Akron interests and holders of large leases in the western Hardin county gas and oil fields made application to city council for a 10-year franchise giving them permission to lay mains for supplying natural gas in the city.

After brief consideration, council referred the request to the gas and light committee for consideration and study and there is a possibility that some definite decision in the matter will be forthcoming before the close of the week.

Under the terms of the franchise and the rate schedule set forth by P. H. Hart and Attorney C. W. White, both of Akron, the gas supply would be taken from the field west of here and would be distributed at a cost of approximately 30 per cent below the present charge of the West Ohio Gas Co. of Lima, which is supplying the city at the present time.

"We have acquired leases on approximately 5,000 acres of land in the western section of Hardin county and are now able to provide the city with an adequate supply of gas," the representatives stated in their petition.

"If the franchise is granted engineers will be put into the field immediately and work in laying the mains will be started as soon as surveys are completed.

Proposed rates set forth in the application for a franchise are: $1 a thousand for the first 2,000 cubic feet consumed in a month; 90 cents a thousand for all gas used in one month in excess of 2,000 cubic feet with a minimum charge of $1 per month to each customer.

On the basis of 3,000 cubic feet, the average consumption per consumer, this amount would cost but $2.90 as compared with $4.11 the amount being paid under the West Ohio schedule, the representatives said.

The present gas rate for the city is: $1.25 per month for the first 400 cubic feet or less; $1.10 per thousand cubic feet for the next 2,600 cubic feet; $1.00 per thousand cubic feet for the next 7,000 cubic feet and 75 cents per thousand feet for all over 10,000 cubic feet.

The Funeral from Our Home

OUR special, modernly constructed establishment furnishes every residence-like appointment: for the remains to rest, awaiting interment; a reception room for friends; a private room for the family; a service room—every requirement of home, but better equipped for the funeral than the home. And with the other far advanced ideas which distinguish our finer service, conducting the funeral from our home has become most preferred: especially, too, because there is no added cost. That advantage is worth considering.

Discouraging to the Railroads.

The return derived from their passenger business for the first half of the present year could hardly have proved other than discouraging to the railroads of the country. Despite the introduction of new and up-to-date equipment which has marked the last three or four years and been especially noticeable during the past eighteen months; despite an almost invariable maintenance of schedules; despite every and all efforts on their part to make rail journeys comfortable and pleasing to their patrons, the first six months of this year showed a falling-off compared with the business of the same period in 1929 of five and a half per cent. in the number of passengers carried, nine per cent. in the number of passengers carried one mile and eleven per cent. in passenger earnings. If the business of the latter half of the year is no better than during the first half, the earnings of the railroads from their passenger patronage will not exceed $780,000,000, which would be about $100,000,000 less than the busines of 1929. A continuation of the business which marked the first six months of the year will mean that the number of passengers carried will be the lowest since 1905; the number of passengers carried one mile, the smallest since 1907 and the earnings the lowest since 1916.

Commenting on the situation in a recent issue, the Railway Age says editorially:

"Railway passenger business reached its maximum in 1920. Its rapid and steady growth until 1920, and its rapid decline since then, mark perhaps the most extraordinary change that ever has occurred in the history of railroad transportation in the United States. Assuming that passenger business throughout 1930 will be relatively as small as during the first half of the year, both traffic and earnings will be about forty per cent. less than in 1920. Passenger earnings in 1920 were about $1,305,000,000, and in 1930 will be about $525,000,000 less than this. The decline in passenger earnings since 1920 is now costing the railways as much annually as would a twelve per cent. reduction in all existing freight rates. As has been frequently pointed out, most of the passenger business lost has been taken by private automobiles, but a large and increasing part of it has been taken by motor coaches. The railways have adopted various methods to hold their traffic, but, as the statistics demonstrate, most of these have been ineffective."

It is worthy of note that the great proportion of the lost passenger business of the railroads has been in day coach business. Suburban traffic excepted, almost all the loss has been suffered in this class of travel, for there has been a steady upward trend—up to the present year, which shows a slight decline—in chair and sleeping car business. It is typical of the age, that the great demand has been for the more luxurious accommodations. The de luxe trains are being splendidly patronized despite the excess fare exacted. Luxury-loving America is not content with anything less than the best.

Rumblings of Revolution.

We of the United States have grown accustomed to the breaking out of revolutions in Latin-American countries, and this is especially true regarding revolts in Central American lands. But there is surprise in the revolts which have broken out or threaten to materialize in South America, for the revolts which have recently been successfully waged down there, are in being or threatened, are in the lands in which the governments have been deemed among the most stable on the continent.

Various causes have been assigned for the revolutions in Bolivia and Peru, each of which resulted in the overthrow of the existing government. It is said that the existing trouble in Argentina is due to the tendency of the government to encroach upon the rights of the various states of the Argentinian commonwealth and the trouble in Brazil is said to be due to banditry, rather than revolution, in the cattle-raising districts of the republic.

All these explanations may be the correct ones, but it's a significant fact that the four countries in which revolt has been waged, is being waged or is threatened are those in which the red element has more than ordinary strength and its activities have been the greatest. And what is true in these South American lands is true to large extent in every land in which a revolution is in progress or is brewing. It is true in China and it is true in India. Behind every revolutionary movement of recent years, there has been the red influence. It may be that not all of them were inaugurated by the reds, but the anarchistic element took advantage of all of them to spread dissension and advance to the utmost bolshevik interests, or what the bolshevik government consists its interests.

Here in the United States we are disposed to be tolerant. We are inclined to rely on what we consider our strength and believe our form of government impregnable to the assaults of such influences. And it should be. Were all of our people capable of realizing the blessings they enjoy under our form of government; were all of such understanding that they could appreciate how much superior to those of any land on earth are living conditions here; were they able to see Russia as it is today and realize that the masses there are living in practical bondage, our government would be impregnable to any undermining. But, unfortunately, there are tens and hundreds of thousands of people in our country who are not blessed with such understanding, and such are ever and always open to the mischievous doctrines which are being promulgated by bolshevik agents and emissaries in this country.

It may be urged that there is too much harping on the subject of red activities, that it gives them a fictitious importance and lends them encouragement. Possibly so. But on the other hand, there is always the possibility that continued repression of words of warning may lull us into a feeling of security, which is assumed rather than real.

It is far safer to be awake to a menace than lulled by a feeling of security into indifference to it. One is the course of reason; the other that of folly.

Six bandits held up a Chicago dairy, a day or two ago, and made off with over $12,000 in cash. This is not run as a light on crime conditions in Chicago, but rather as an illustration of how nickels and dimes mount into big totals.

An idol thirty-three feet in height and twenty feet in diameter, held to be the largest in America, which has twice been reported seen, but track of which had been lost, has been rediscovered near Tecoco, about forty miles from Mexico City. Editorial Opinion.

THE STAGE.

Cardinal Hayes, of the New York archdiocese, is joined by the Right Reverend Bishop William T. Manning in his attack on the American stage. Bishop Manning asserts: "The present degradation of the stage is a calamity and a reflection upon all of us."

The Catholic prelate approaches the matter with militant ardor. He chooses an appropriate time. Earl Carroll is producing his "Vanities" and the more classical "Lysistrata." With respect to the latter it may be said that while Aristophanic humor may have met the taste of his age, when rendered into New Yorkese it is quite literally something else again. As a matter of fact, as Monsignor Lavelle puts it, the two productions demonstrate "a very inferior opinion of the taste and character of the fine men and women" who attend the theaters.

Rabbi Stephen Wise makes the third distinguished New York cleric to denounce the particular plays mentioned and the present tendency of the stage to prurient representation in general. He said: "I speak for the best intelligence and the high standards of my people in pledging support to any movement which would fumigate the drama, and again make the theater a place of enchantment and beauty rather than a cesspool."

Broad, bawdy, animal humor is not—at present—to be hounded from the stage just because eminent and decent religious leaders condemn and denounce it. Their chief concern should be with the people, "the fine men and women" who patronize and—shall it be said, who heartily enjoy?—the presentations which disclose that "frankness" and complacent realism, joined with spectacular beauty and opulence, are not repugnant in the eyes and consciousness of present-day sophisticated and "emancipated" multitudes of "fine men and women" who seek relaxation in the suggestive mimicry of stage offerings, and possibly in other directions.

"Vanities" and "Lysistrata" without paying audiences to witness them would not last long. In the meantime, if we fail to attend the theater we may perhaps turn to Shakespeare, Boccaccio, Pretonius, Arbiter, and Rabelais for the mental pabulum our souls may desire.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

A Romance of the War.

BY J. H. GALBRAITH.

The late General I. R. Sherwood left among his reminiscences of the war an interesting story of a romance concerning Ben LeFevre, for a number of terms the representative in congress of the Fifth Ohio district. LeFevre, who was a major general, found himself soldiering with the forces to which General Sherwood was attached at the close of hostilities at Salisbury, North Carolina.

He was a portly man and then in the prime of young manhood and was likely to make an impression on womankind anywhere. But the belles of Salisbury had resolved never to smile or even look upon any of the "Yankee" officers who had come among them. But LeFevre contrived to be invited to the home of General Carr, of Salisbury, who had just been mustered out of the confederate services, and there met the general's sister, Miss Pauline Carr, described by LeFevre as a beautiful girl with dove's eyes, who felt that before the evening was over she was just a little sorry there was a general ban against the "Yankee" officers.

She sang well and the only unfortunate thing that occurred that evening at her brother's house was that she sang some confederate songs that grated on his ears. Later he related that he had induced her to sing a number of union songs, but she still balked at "Marching Through Georgia" and "John Brown's Body."

The upshot was that when LeFevre was mustered out and left for his home in Ohio he was engaged to Miss Pauline Carr, of Salisbury. Like a dutiful family man, LeFevre laid the matter before the family circle for their judgment and found that sentiment was against the alliance. They looked upon him as a young man with a future and it would be ruined if he married a young woman of the confederacy.

Sorrowfully he told Miss Carr of the opposition of his family, and she promptly released him from his engagement. She died five years later, it is said, of a broken heart. General LeFevre lived to be eighty, but never married, and, it is said, continued to think of the last of his southern sweetheart with the sincerest affection.

First Aid to Injured.

BY ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.

If "cleanliness is next to godliness," as the Biblical saying goes, then certainly it should be applied in the case of an injured member of the anatomy. Every one should know what to do in case of a cut or wound in the flesh.

When we speak of cleanliness in this sense, we mean surgical cleanliness. A surgeon will use bichloride of mercury or some other antiseptic in treating a wound, but in first aid rendered by a layman, water which has been boiled and cooled is one of the best things with which to wash out a wound.

It matters not whether the wound is a cut with a knife or there is a tear in the flesh by a piece of tin or rusty nail. In any case absolute cleanliness is the secret of right healing.

Before touching the victim's wound a person should wash his hands very thoroughly with soap and water. Then clean the finger nails carefully, after which wash the hands again.

Apply the sterilized water, either pouring it copiously over the wound or apply it with pieces of sterilized gauze or cotton. Wash out every particle of dirt, splinters, bits of rust or any other foreign substance. Clean the wound thoroughly with the water.

After cleaning the wound should be dried with a piece of the gauze. Then the edges of the wound be brought together with strips of adhesive tape, using the strips crosswise of the wound. The wound should not be entirely covered, but enough left exposed so that there will be drainage.

Then cover the whole with several layers of gauze and bandage it well. Of course, later a surgeon can use sutures and give treatment if necessary.

If the patient is in a place where sterilized water can not be had in an emergency the cleanest water possible should be used. The bandaging can be done with a clean piece of cloth or clean handkerchief. However, the wound should be seen by a doctor as soon as possible and the proper treatment given.

Every household should have its first aid kit. It can be had very reasonably. Have at least a solution of iodine (a seven per cent. solution is all right) and apply it to cuts and other injuries. It should be painted on and around the wound before washing with sterilized water.—Copyright, 1930, by Newspaper Feature Service, Inc.

Air Transport of Future.

BY ARCHIBALD HENDERSON.

One of the most tremendous problems of the day, now attracting the attention of the entire civilized world, is the future of air transport. At the beginning of the development of the automobile industry a motor car was regarded as a luxury—a rich man's toy. Today the development of the industry is so great as to affect, either directly or indirectly, almost every one now living. The future of air transport is not confronted with many obstacles, for there are no good roads to be built at the cost of billions of dollars. Guide routes and beacons are all that are needed in the way of roads. The principal task is the construction of suitable landing fields.

In this country aviation is regulated by the department of commerce. The rules and regulations set up have for their purpose the conserving of life and property. Under the air commerce act of 1926 the aeronautics branch of the department of commerce was established. Increase in safety, the promotion of the science of aeronautics and the development of flying are the major objectives.

The three factors in aviation constantly kept in the foreground are sound design, reliable construction and intelligent operation of aircraft.

The human mind reacts unfavorably to the idea of delay in arriving at destinations when important issues are at stake. No one wants to lose time, if it can be avoided. In consequence, man will continue to prosecute efforts to reduce the time in transit from point to point. This is the psychological factor which promises to give rise to great development in speed of air travel in the near future. Already, the continent has been traversed by airplane at an average rate of more than two hundred miles an hour. This extraordinary development is a feature of the growth of commercial aviation, which has existed for only about five years. Prior to 1925 there were some passenger air lines operating in Europe; and in this country only air service of limited scope had been developed.

At the present moment air transport may be said to be in a state of unstable equilibrium. Although a very large percentage of the Americans have traveled in the air, mostly in single flights with a trained pilot, the prohibitive cost of a first-class airplane is seriously retarding the industry. Although air travel is now safer than any one would have believed possible only a few years ago, many people are still unwilling to risk their lives in the air.

People understand accidents in surface transportation, and discount them accordingly. But airplane or dirigible accidents are mysterious, and not fully understood, even by experts. Some time will be required to inspire the general public with confidence in the safety of aircraft. Aviation, generally, will take a great step forward when a safe and economical airplane is put on the market, a machine as well within the reach of every man as the inexpensive motor car.

In the near future we shall surely have passenger air service on a twenty-four hour basis. Already huge passenger planes are being constructed or are already in service. Air travel is more expensive; but the increase in the size of the passenger planes on the main lines of air travel will greatly reduce the cost of operation per passenger. Greater speed of passenger aircraft will rapidly be attained. And there are almost no limits to the possible development of the dirigible.—Copyright, 1930, International Feature Service, Inc.

New York Day by Day.

BY O. O. McINTYRE.

New York, Sept. 4—There are hard-headed, tight-fisted and outwardly unsentimental business men in New York who have poetical moments. Recently I attended one of the dinners, held yearly, where they light cigars, relax and cup ears for seraphic lyrics and satirical iambics.

These are men reporters describe as "steely-jawed with cold gray eyes and crisp white mustaches." They swamp corporations, tear down blocks to run up office buildings and buy ships by the fleet. Yet keep fingers on the poetical pulse—ancient and modern.

Save for two exceptions, not a person present would not be catalogued as one having an interest in poetry and less interest in a poet. Yet I was told several privately provided funds to further the education of those displaying poetical talents.

It interested me that a commercially conspicuous gentleman on my right found his favorite lines in Dubose Heyward's "Epitaph to a Poet," reading:

"That all success is but a prison,
And only those who fail are free."

My knowledge of poetry is about that high, yet it strikes me the most appealing lines symbolize agonizing futility and as such depress. Nothing, to me, is more poignant with frustration than Edna Millay's popular lines:

"My candle burns at both ends:
It will not last the night;
But ah, my foes, and Oh, my friends—
It gives a lovely light."

I belong to the saloon school of poetical expression. Poems I enjoyed most were recited by blotto gentlemen, featuring such classics as "I have been faithful to thee, Cytherea, etc." and that one about "the lady named Lou." I enjoyed them most when slightly potted myself.

A Washington Daybook.

BY HERBERT PLUMMER.

Washington, Sept. 4 — Upon the broad shoulders of Joshua Reuben Clark, Jr., may fall the mantle of the diminutive Dwight W. Morrow as United States ambassador to Mexico. The big, jovial Utahan frequently is mentioned as a likely nominee for the post.

Long a friend of Morrow's, Clark went with him to Mexico when he was named ambassador. There, as intimate assistant without official status, he has been Morrow's legal adviser and right-hand man in the adjustment of problems which the American ambassador faced.

One-time under secretary of state and an expert on Mexican affairs, Clark has a long record of service for the government. It dates from 1906 when he entered the state department as assistant solicitor.

He has in turn served as solicitor of the department, chairman of various highly important missions at international conferences, counselor and expert assistant for the state department, under secretary of state, and special counselor for Morrow.

Of stocky build, weighing more than 200 pounds and about five feet nine inches in height, Clark is the kind of man who always is in a good humor.

Kellogg, when secretary of state, held up the appointment of under secretary until Utah republicans voted as to whether or not they should send Clark to the United States senate. And when he lost the nomination, Kellogg persuaded him to take over the post.

At the state department they describe him in one sentence:

"Reuben Clark is as solid as a rock."

Perhaps the best illustration of this solidity ascribed to Clark by his friends is found in the way he met a crisis in our foreign policy on the eve of Mr. Hoover's inauguration as President.

A revolution broke out in Mexico at that time. Clark then was under secretary and the state department's expert on Mexican affairs. Upon him rested responsibility of placing immediately in the hands of the incoming president recommendations as to policy.

It was at night when he received first word of the revolt. He gathered all the information he could from news dispatches. Then he telegraphed all American diplomatic representatives in Mexico to send him quickly all the facts concerning the outbreak, underscoring the word facts.

When he had received these, he retired to his home on the night of March 3 to write his memorandum for the president who was to be inauguration the next day.

All night he worked. And when President Hoover entered the executive offices of the White House the next day, the first thing to greet his eyes was Clark's report and recommendations on the Mexican revolt.

Never before, say officials of the state department, has the department met so quickly and so thoroughly a crisis in foreign policy.

tered late Tuesday night, with many more promised.

Shows and displays will excel those of last year, according to Secretary Sifritt. With a midway already signed that includes more features than that of last year, Secretary Sifritt reported rapid sale of art hall space. A reduction in rates from $1.50 to $1 a front foot has been made in art hall exhibitions this year. Outside display booths of farm machinery and other bulky displays will include everything seen last year and several new displays.

Granges Plan Exhibits

Seven granges of Marion county have prepared exhibits that are second to none in Ohio, even comparing with those seen at the State Fair, according to Secretary Sifritt. First, second and third prizes will be given in the grange displays.

Concessions sold to date are better than those of last year. Additional concessions will be booked this week.

Considerable work during the last few months have put the grounds in excellent condition for the eighteenth fair, according to members of the board. Fences have been straightened, the track has been graded and banked slightly steeper and all buildings cleaned and conditioned.

Prominent candidates for state offices may grace the speakers' stand on one or more days of the fair if invitations to appear before fair crowds are favorably received by the candidates. In the event a sufficient number of widely known candidates agree to appear here, a public address system will probably be installed.

Premium Book Out

The board has just issued copies of the new premium book. Through arrangement with local men this year, a more attractive book, containing advertising, has been prepared at no expense to the board, where an annual expenditure of $100 was previously required to print the book.

Fairgrounds will be policed by Marion patrolmen during the 1930 fair. Boy Scouts will assist with parking and directing traffic.

Although reductions have been made in the majority of premiums this year, the prizes still compare favorably with those of a majority of Ohio counties, according to Secretary Sifritt who has completed a comparison of local awards with other fairs of the state. In a majority of instances, a fee of 20 per cent of the prize is assessed the winner, reducing his actual award to as low or lower than the premiums offered here.

A number of Marion merchants are giving away the equivalent of five admissions to the grounds with every purchase of more than $5 during August.

COSTE AND BELLONTE SPEEDING TO DALLAS

French Aviators Due in Texas This Afternoon in Flight for $25,000 Prize.

for the Texas city was delayed an hour by the necessity of constructing a special device for spinning the propellor which is set so high that it is very difficult for mechanics standing on the ground to start the engine.

The device failed but the motor was at last started by volunteers, who risked their lives by leaping into the air to hang on the high propellor blades.

Capt. Coste expected to make the journey to Dallas.

Coste had 420 gallons of gasoline pumped into the ship before he left. The radio which was in operation for all but the last few miles of the trans-Atlantic journey was still broken when today's flight began but no difficulty was expected as perfect flying weather was reported.

Get Little Sleep

The fliers arrived at the field about 3 a. m., having had less than four hours sleep. When they were awakened after their brief rest in a New York hotel Coste immediately jumped from bed ready for the new adventure but Bellonte was less eager to face the day with so little slumber.

"Just let me have five minutes more sleep," he begged when he was shaken into consciousness, but Coste, a strict disciplinarian, had him out of bed long before that period was elapsed.

Once at the field, fueling was immediately begun under Coste's supervision and Bellonte immediately went to work upon maps of the route they are to cover.

When the fueling was completed and the plane first wheeled from the hangar newspaper photographers and sound reel men surrounded the ship and began taking pictures of plane and crew. Coste, irked at the delay, kept shouting "Vite, Vite", and finally succeeded in getting his ship to the flying line. Then came the delay occasioned by the difficulty in starting the motor and when at last the engine burst into action and was sufficiently warmed to avoid all possible danger on the take-off the fliers lost no time in climbing into their famous ship and following their manager into the air.

Meeting Planned

Racover planned to stop at Louisville for fuel and probably wait there for Coste to catch up to him, for the red cabin monoplane in which the manager was flying is far faster than the sesquiplane.

Arrangement was also made for a rendezvous of the two planes in air above Greenville, Tex., which is about 40 miles from Dallas. The take-off today was witnessed by not more than 200 persons in striking contrast to the thousands who broke through police lines and almost caused a riot of jubilation when the Frenchmen arrived here the day before yesterday.

The red sesquiplane veteran of almost countless adventures in the air, made a romantic picture as it towed from its dim hangar into the early morning sunlight. On its scarlet flanks were inscribed the names of far cities to which it has traveled under the guidance of the former war ace who was at its controls today.

Among these cities were such names as Taitsikar, Karbine, Calcutta, Karachi, Athens, Rome, Hanoi, Shanghai, and Alep.

For it is in this plane that Coste flew around the world except for the Pacific, made world honors for both straight line and closed course distance flights and in several weight carrying events.

Texas Ready For Reception

By The Associated Press

DALLAS, Tex., Sept. 4—The tricolor of France and the Stars and Stripes floated together in Dallas today as a thrilled city suspended normal activities to give a traditional Texas welcome to Captain Dieudonne Coste and Maurice Bellonte.

This city was the rendesvous of airmen throughout the southwest who flew here to participate in the welcome of the Frenchmen, flying to Dallas from New York to collect a purse of $25,000 offered by Col. William E. Easterwood, now in Ireland. Fifteen army planes from Kelly field, San Antonio, were in the convoy assembled here to fly north to greet the scarlet sesquiplane which triumphed over more than 4,000 miles of storms, fogs and hazardous weather between Le Bourget and Curtiss fields.

The program of welcome called for official greetings from Governor Dan Moody, or his representative, in behalf of the state.

Detachments of Dallas policemen, assisted by several companies of national guardsmen, had been assigned to guard the planes at the field and keep the crowd from rushing in upon the fliers when they landed.

The National Broadcasting company has opened a special wire from Dallas to New York for a coast to coast network broadcast of the landing and reception, with station WFAA, a 50,000 watt station, as the key station.

After ceremonies at the field, a parade into town was planned and a dinner in honor of Coste and Bellonte was arranged for tonight.

Hoover Speaking Program Seen as Campaign Opener

President Expected To Discuss National Questions in Addresses Set for October; Four Talks in 6-Day Period.

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON, Sept. 4—Viewed generally as the opening of President Hoover's campaign for return of his party to power in congress in the fall and for his own reelection two years hence, his acceptance of invitations to make four addresses early in October was widely speculated upon, in the capital today.

Marking as it does a sharp departure from the policy followed by his predecessor in office, the program of four major speeches in six days, which was announced late yesterday, also will be one of the most ambitious efforts of Mr. Hoover upon the platform.

Will Meet Voters

Not only will the quartet of addresses take him to three widely separated states but it will permit him to gain contact with the people of several others as he passes through.

It has been generally accepted that all of his addresses are to be appropriate to the occasion, which might mean that before the American Bankers' association at Cleveland, on Oct. 2, he would talk on finances and business, and before the American Federation of Labor in Boston on the afternoon of Oct. 6, he would discuss unemployment. These two invitations were the latest accepted.

Both would give him an excellent opportunity, it was held today in political circles of "selling" his administration in a way that would not be inappropriate for a president.

To Address Legion

His speech on the morning of Oct. 6 before the American Legion in Boston and that at the Kings mountain battle anniversary celebration on Oct. 7, may be devoted to more general questions, if the President chooses to carry his cases directly to the country in this initial broadside.

At Kings mountain, Mr. Hoover will detrain and be formally received in North Carolina, one of the southern states which gave him its electoral vote in 1928.

Many Die In Hurricane

the supplies of food apparently having been destroyed in the storm. Many who escaped in scanty attire were in need of clothing.

Hundreds of refugees wandered in a daze through the debris seeking a place where they could snatch some sleep.

The first airplane pilot to fly over the stricken city reported that the heart of the hurricane apparently had cut over the city.

Pilot J. E. Williamson, flying an amphibian plane of the Pan American airways, sent a radio message that he had flown over the ruined tropical city at 10:30 a. m. (Marion time).

The flier did not report the number of dead and injured.

SHIP BATTLES GALE

Ohioans on Board Liner That Narrowly Escapes.

By The Associated Press

SAN JUAN, Porto Rico, Sept. 4 — A battered tropical passenger liner limped into port today after having passed through the very center of one of the worst hurricanes the Caribbean has known in many years. The ship, the Porto Rico liner Coamo, in charge of Captain Thomas Evans, escaped annihilation narrowly.

The Coamo turned back from Santo Domingo, her destination last night, and for a dozen hours, no word came of her fate.

Her wireless failed early in the evening and it had been feared disaster had been visited upon the ship and all on board.

Emerging from the great wind storm this morning, the skipper, Captain Evans, brought the Coamo safely to anchor but he could not explain how, with the storm at its height all about him, amid furious seas, the ship missed being wiped out. Several passengers were injured, none seriously.

The steamship Catherine also made port this morning with her afterMast blown away but otherwise undamaged.

Among the Coamo's passengers was John S. Reeves of Youngstown, O., George Powers of Joliet, Ills., and M. H. Stauffer of Newton Falls, O.

Because of storm warnings the Coamo had delayed sailing from San Juan for Santo Domingo a full day. During the early hours of yesterday the barometer went on a rampage, rising and falling and stopping at 27.75 because it could go no lower.

The ship was then four miles off Santo Domingo harbor. The seas were running too high to permit anchorage. Capt. Evans cruised about, hoping for a calm.

Suddenly a strong off-shore wind and rain blotted out the island. From then until afternoon the storm rose in intensity. Just before 1 p. m., the captain said, the ship approached the center of the disturbance.

"In all my years at sea I never have encountered more wind," Capt. Evans said.

can be made to turn the pages of sheet music.

For extinguishing the lights a person blows into a trim little funnel which resembles the mouth piece of a telephone.

Makes "Contact"

The breath strikes phosphor bronze springs arranged so that the air impact strikes a large surface and is thereby amplified sufficiently to make a regular "contact." The position of the springs at the bottom of the funnel protects them from being affected by ordinary air currents.

The story is that a friend of Dr. Free, objecting jokingly to putting his hands on apparatus handled by other persons, said:

"Why don't you scientists give us something so that we don't have to touch things if we don't want to."

"That's easy," was Free's reply. "We could do it with just a puff of air."

Dragging Feet

If your VITALITY is slipping away from you try S.S.S.

JUST one complaint—those dragging feet—yet they tell a big story. Back at the fountain-head the red-blood-cells are not up to standard. When your red-blood-cells are only 80% you are NOT yourself—60% is dangerous. You haven't the vitality to fight infection and disease.

S.S.S.—the great blood Tonic—stimulates the blood-building organs to supply the necessary red-cells. Your appetite picks up. Your body is strengthened, invigorated—you feel like yourself again! And DRAGGING FEET become STEPPING FEET.

Take S.S.S. before each meal. Millions of people have found it the easiest and surest way to keep themselves "fit." Its successful record of over 100 years in building red-cells in the blood is a guarantee of satisfaction. Get the large size bottle. At all drug stores. S.S.S. Co.

"Lazy" Said the Boss

"Acidity" Said the Doctor!

Charged with laziness— guilty simply of acidity! That's the situation with many men today. Always tired, have to pull themselves together for each and every task. They're branded as lazy and ambitionless when the real truth is that they're sick men—victims of acidity.

Excess acid, forming in the stomach causes acid-indigestion with gas, sourness and burning. It also sets up fermentation and putrefaction in the gastro-intestinal canal. This breeds poisons that sap our strength and vitality and so tax our nerves that we can't sleep soundly at night or work efficiently during the day.

Magnesia Oxoids developed in Germany by a famous, 100-year-old pharmaceutical house, correct acidity in the right way! Upon contact with the acid in the stomach, Magnesia Oxoids generate nascent, or active, oxygen. The "live" oxygen stimulates the alkaline gastric mucus, checks putrefaction in the gastro-intestinal canal and stimulates the activities of the intestinal walls which aids the natural movement of the bowels. All three effects are necessary to the true correction of acidity.

Make this Acidity Test

To ascertain just how "acid" you are, make this test. Get a package of Magnesia Oxoids at small cost from Bradley's Drug Store or any other good druggist. Take two after each meal and see how much better you feel—how much more soundly you sleep and how much more energy you have. If, after taking the contents of one bottle, you don't notice a decided improvement, return the bottle to the druggist and he will cheerfully refund your money.—Adv.

CHILDREN CRY FOR IT—

CHILDREN hate to take medicine as a rule, but every child loves the taste of Castoria. And this pure vegetable preparation is just as good as it tastes; just as bland and just as harmless as the recipe reads.

When Baby's cry warns of colic, a few drops of Castoria has him soothed, asleep again in a jiffy. Nothing is more valuable in diarrhea. When coated tongue or bad breath tell of constipation, invoke its gentle aid to cleanse and regulate a child's bowels. In colds or children's diseases, you should use it to keep the system from clogging.

Castoria is sold in every drugstore; the genuine always bears Chas. H. Fletcher's signature.

CHAPTER 37

The End of the Quest

WITHIN the ranch house, the familiar, cool darkness was like a caress. Uncle Jim, breathing a little easily, took her elbow and steered her into the living-room. Her eyes were becoming accustomed to the dimness, and she recognized the picture of Sir Arkwright Sherrill over the mantelpiece, and the copy of the Blue Boy she had treasured. She was glad she had left them at Casa Blanca. She had felt that they particularly belonged in this room; they were a part of all that it had come to mean to her. And immersed in dream she didn't notice at once the tall figure that rose from a seat beside her.

"Humph!" said Uncle Jim. "Humph! That new foreman, Dagmar. Reckon yew're acquainted." She turned, her heart in her throat.

"So you came back to the oasis," said a deep voice that set all her nerves vibrating.

"Elaine."

Neither of them heard Jim Marker chuckling as he gingerly tiptoed away.

"You don't need to make any hurry with dinner, Niko," he remarked to the little Japanese cook who still lingered in the hall.

A few days later she was riding with Howard on the range. The horses came to a halt, tails flicking idly in the heat. Below, the river was a desultory trickle threading the mud-flats between the wide banks. The only other sign of life was the inevitable pair of buzzards soaring high over Mexico. Dagger kneed Desmond closer, and leaned her head on Blaine's shoulder.

"It might have been yesterday," she said.

"Not for me," he answered a little grimly.

She raised her eyes to his, and one hand stole up to pat the silvery streak above his temple.

"You went through all kinds of hell. Poor Blaine! But you're really not Blaine Howard now. Blaine Howard is dead, and I reckon the hell he had died with him."

Howard frowned perplexedly.

"It's a queer situation,' he confessed. "Here I am legally dead, the woman I was married to legally remarried to a man I'm proud to call my friend. I expect my money has been duly distributed to my heirs, and the people I used to know are reconciled to living without me. So I'm more than a man without a country—I'm a man without an identity, unless I choose to carry on as Stacey Hawkins, who died in my arms and said with his last breath: 'No, there isn't a blighter in the world means anything to me, thank God!'"

Dagger frowned in her turn.

"I won't marry Stacey Hawkins," she announced. "I don't love him. The man I love is Blaine Howard, and if he's dead we'll have to try some sort of a miracle to bring him back to life."

"Such as?"

She laughed lazily, offering her lips.

"Is it a fair price?" she asked presently. And the pressure of his arms was enough response.

"Steady, Desmond," she managed to gasp. "Oh, darling—one breath!" And then, illogically: "I suppose you would have come here anyway. I didn't need to go chasing all over the world after the shadow of a memory."

"I'm not so sure," returned Howard. "I haven't told you this, but—just when was it you saw Ghulam Buk?"

She told him.

"Peculiar! It was that night or the next I met an American aviator who'd come up from Shanghai to sell Chang a bunch of old Jennies. We got to talking about the war, and he spun a yarn of a girl who'd been standing them all up on the flying fields at San Antonio. Why I asked him more about her I don't know; but I did. She was you, of course. And I prodded him on. He told me of your marriage and your husband's death. Next day I started for America, and naturally, I headed for the ranch."

"And what does all this mean? Surely, you don't think that Ghulam Buk did some white magic!"

Howard stared out into the emptiness that surrounded them.

"I don't know, Dagger," he confessed. "There are forces in this world that few of us understand. The strongest power in man's possession is an idea, a thought. Perhaps you had been building up a whole chain of thoughts in your pilgrimage, a chain which carried you to Ghuham Buk, and impelled him to will that aviator to meet me—and then influenced Chang to admit to you I was alive. And if you knew Chang as well as I did, you'd realize that that was the most remarkable act in the chain."

"I wonder," exclaimed Dagger. "And yet there's reason in your theory. It was Raoul who moved me to follow your trail, Blaine. And Sidi Marut gave me courage to go on to India. And Ghulam Buk—yes, it all does dovetail."

She fumbled in her breeches pocket, and produced the jade luck-piece the Tu-chun had given her.

"By the way," she continued, "I can't help thinking well of Chang. He gave me his luck-piece. He'd carried it ever since he was a boy."

"My God," exploded Howard, snatching at the carved bit of stone, a handsbreath long. "D'you realize what that meant? D'you know what's happened? But no, you didn't see the papers that came today. Dagger, this thing was famous all over China. Men have died trying to steal it. Attempts were made to assassinate Chang simply in order to win it. And yesterday one succeeded. His train was blown up just outside of the Sung-fu station."

"Oh!" Dagger's mouth quivered. "How terrible! But it wasn't because he gave it to me, Blaine. That's ridiculous!"

"Any more ridiculous than that your thoughts built a bridge over which we might come together? No, Chang gave it to you deliberately. He believed implicity in luck—or call it destiny, if you choose. And he believed that his luck was dependent upon this stone. When he gave it to you he was giving a hostage to his luck. He was saying, in effect: 'This woman is all to me. Bring her to me. If that may not be, I do not choose to live!'"

"But it can't be true," she insisted. "Blaine, it's only a little piece of jade that's cold when you touch it, with a dragon twisting around it. How could that kill a man?"

"It didn't kill him. What killed him was the power that he attributed to it in his mind. Thought, again. What you believe in, if you believe with sufficient conviction, is very likely to happen."

Dagger took it back from him.

"Shall we throw it away?" she asked suddenly.

"Why?"

"Well, if we believe in it, as you say, it will help to keep us happy. If we don't or if we lose it——"

He tightened his arm around her waist.

"Suppose we keep it—in memory of Chang," he interrupted. "But let's believe in each other. If we believe truly, no harm can injure us."

"We'll keep it," she decided. "We'll call it the luck of the Oasis, and whenever we go away, it will have to bring us back."

"Do you want to go away?" he asked, laughing.

She drew closer to him. Her eyes were seeking his.

"So long as I am with you," she said,—"what does it matter?"

Jubilee's Pardner

A Story of Boyhood Adventure

—BY JUDD M. LEWIS—

THURSDAY. There is something about the summer time that a fella likes. Maybe it is the grapes or the apples, or the peaches or the swimming hole, but I think it is the vacation. But I know I wouldn't like vacation quite so well if it came in the winter time. A fella couldn't have no fun hooking snowballs or robbing icicles, but apples and peaches and things are different.

I let Jubilee down and went down and milked and done everything I have to do before I get my breakfast, and then I swiped a couple of pancakes for Jubilee, and then we all wondered why Banty hadn't been to the barn, so we started to his house to see if he was sick or had busted any part of himself, and we saw him coming down the street and he had a butter-tub a little bigger than a water bucket under each arm, and he is only about as big as a pint of shucked peanuts, so when he was a long ways off it looked like two big eyes and a nose out for a walk, and we all skun out to see who would get to him first, and he set the tubs down and waited for us, because his arms was too short to go around them to hold them good, and he was tired.

The little nut had nailed some straps inside of the tubs on the bottoms for his feet, and he was going to walk on the water with them. It was a good idee and we all gave him the knickskopf, which is rubbing his head with our knuckles as hard as we could to see where he got the idee. He was sore but proud when we let him go, and we carried the tubs and hiked out for the pasture as fast as we could go. The girls thought we were crazy. They still think so.

We were going to take them out to the back of the poorhouse to the river, but we couldn't wait so we went over to Mud Turkle pond to try them out, and Banty wanted first shot at them, but Feeble rolled her eyes at him and he let her. She put her feet through the straps and walked down the bank and stepped out on the water and both tubs went out and apart and she sot down on the wet edge of the pond so hard she made her mark on the mud and sot there looking crosseyed at us. So Banty took them off her and put his feet in, and he got about two steps from the bank and fell on his face, and we had to pull him out. Then we all tried it and none of us could make them work. We all fell in and got soaked and Pickles and Peanuts nearly got drownded. Only the Lost Bag of Tripe wouldn't try them, so we threw him in.

We had a lot of fun, only I skinned my shin on the edge of the buckets, and the Lost Bag of Tripe got mad and started throwing mud, and that started the rest of us, and we all got plastered. Feeble went home because she had sot in the mud and Younise and Maggie went along, so then we could take our clothes off and wrench them out and have a swim. We left the tubs out there. Some things aren't as easy as they look.

Love's Reawakening

A Wife's Triumph Over Jealousy

—BY ADELE GARRISON—

Madge Manoeuvers to Get the Producer Out of the Way

MR. SEIBEL'S presence in the hotel dining room made it impossible for me to do anything save acquiesce in Mr. Veritzen's plans for the dinner decorations; hoping that the restaurant proprietor would accept the reason for my employers' interest that I had given him—that the party was being given in honor of Mary, the fiance of the great producer's son, and his own stage protegee.

I schooled my voice to airy casualness, therefore, although I felt far more like telling my employer to take his flowers and himself to some spot as far removed from me as possible.

"That's my favorite occupation, being surprised," I said. "If I can possibly manage it, I will leave the dining room just before the cloth is laid and not return until I bring Mary down to see the finished effect of everything."

Mr. Veritzen drew his eyebrows together at my mention of Mary, but he made no oral comment, instead turned back to the table.

Madge Exacts a Promise

"But what's this?" he said as he saw the array of vases and bowls, patently the property of the hotel, which Mr. Seibel was setting out upon a table, and at which I was secretly shuddering, they were so commonplace—and inartistic.

"Haven't A. and G."—he named a leading florist's—"sent my vases to me? These will never do."

Secretly I agreed with him, although I should have striven to express my disapproval at bit more tactfully.

"I haven't seen anything of the sort," Mr. Seibel rejoined a trifle curtly.

"Where's the telephone?" Mr. Veritzen lost no time in getting to the instrument which Mr. Seibel silently indicated, and when he had secured his connection, his tones were sulphurous, although he restrained his vocabulary evidently in deference to my presence.

"Remember, not later than twenty minutes," he said finally as he hung up the telephone, and my heart started downward toward my toes. He gave every evidence of intending to stay in the dining room indefinitely, and knowing Dicky's penchant for making unexpected decisions, I knew that I might expect him in the dining room much earlier than the hour he had named when he was telephoning me. Edith's blabbing — I deliberately used the unpleasant word—undoubtedly had put him in a mood which would cause him to resent even the presence of Philip Veritzen in the dining room. How he would react to my employer's proprietorial air concerning the decorations, I could imagine most vividly and—unpleasantly.

I must do something to get Mr. Veritzen out of the dining room, and that quickly. Luckily, Mr. Seibel left the dining room on some errand immediately following Mr. Veritzen's telephone conversation. Remembering an old adage of my childhood concerning vinegar and flies, I looked over at my employer with a friendly little smile.

"I promised you to stay away and be 'surprised' about the dinner table decorations," I said. "I wonder if you would make me a promise."

"You only have to name it," he said fervently.

"Please don't be offended," I faltered, trying to register shy nervousness, "but I'm terribly nervous and fussy when I'm working with flowers. I simply have to be alone, except, of course, for some one like Purnell who can hand me things."

Dicky Overhears

"nAd you want me to get out?" he said, smiling down at me indulgently. With wrath modified by mirth, I saw that he was fatuously imaging his own fascinating personality to be the disturbing element in my work. But I was beyond caring. My one thought was to get him away.

"Do you mind?" I asked appealingly.

"Suppose I told you that I did?" he countered softly.

"Suppose I asked you to go anyway," I retorted with pretended pertness.

"Then I have but one alternative to obey your commands," he said, bowing impressively. "Must I go at once, or may I stay until the vases are delivered and those flowers which I sent back are replaced?"

"Couldn't I telephone you when they arrive?" I asked with ostentatious, fussiness. "Then if they are all right you need not come down again. I promise faithfully to report anything wron."

"Then I will go at once," he said. "I have to attend to the corsages on this list Lillian gave me, anyway. Remember, yours is already ordered. Have you decided yet whose flowers you are to wear?"

"Not yet," I answered, shaking my head in pretended reproof as he turned away. The swinging door from the lobby had but just closed behind him when Dicky's voice sounded behind me.

"Don't you think it's about time you did that little thing?" he drawled lelly.

Marion Co. Farm Youth Joins Ton Litter Club

Delbert Lichtenberger, 15, Raises Three Broods of Pigs Which Weigh Over 2,000 Pounds at Six Months; Wins State Fair Prizes.

Delbert Lichtenberger, 15, son of Mr. and Mrs. Grover Lichtenberger of Pleasant township, is eligible for membership in the Ohio Ton Litter club following an announcement today that three litters of pigs under his care had each passed the one-ton mark in the required six months time.

The check on the weights of the pigs, made Friday and Monday, will be sent to the Ohio club today for official registration. The first litter of 11 pigs weighed 2,607 pounds, the second litter of 12 pigs weighed 2,424 pounds and the third litter of 9 pigs weighed 2,079 pounds.

Average 237 Pounds

The first litter averaged 237 pounds, the second litter 202 pounds and the third litter 231 pounds.

Eligibility in the club requires that each boy wishing to enter the club raise a litter that weighs a ton or more at the end of 180 days. The pigs are weighed at birth and marked with witnesses present, and thereafter when weights are taken, witnesses must be present in order that no complications arise when a ton litter is announced.

The average farmer produces hogs of this weight in approximately seven months.

By producing hogs of this size in six months, the farmer saves feed by reducing the length of time he feeds them and usually receives more money per pound by marketing approximately a month before the market is flooded by other breeders.

Wins at Fair

The reason for Lichtenberger's progress in the six months was due to balanced feed with protein supplement. He also practiced the McLean County system of swine sanitation. This system will be demonstrated at the Marion County Junior fair in which Lichtenberger expects to show one of his three ton litters. The system will be demonstrated by the Pleasant Township Vocational agriculture department.

Lichtenberger is one of the successful young farmers of Pleasant township. His Duroc entries in the Junior fair at the recent Ohio State fair, brought him one first award, two second award ribbons and one third award.

Many men who get credit for keeping their tempers have none.

NEW YORK—Coat tails are unasked as a necessity of the well dressed man when stepping out the coming season. SIX CASES SLATED FOR GRAND JURY

Jurors To Meet Monday To Open September Common Pleas Court Term.

Six cases are scheduled to come before the Marion county grand jury when that body convenes next Monday to open the September term in common pleas court.

The charge of second degree murder against Lloyd Bensley, free on bond in connection with the fatal shooting of Haze Ashbrook, will be among those considered by the jury. Bensley was bound over to the grand jury following the shooting, after he was alleged to have shot Ashbrook during an altercation over a child in the Ashbrook home in Prospect. The child is the son of Ashbrook by his former wife, who is now the wife of Bensley.

The charge of breaking and entering a dwelling against Everett Barnhill, and of breaking and entering a storehouse against John Hopkins will also be considered. Hopkins is a member of a family alleged to have broken into a granary of Norris Carey of near Green Camp and to have stolen about 60 bushels of wheat.

The jury will consider a case of carrying concealed weapons against Henry Blue, and one of grand larceny against John Blue.

Marion Piper, one of a trio of youths charged with having stolen a quantity of gasoline from a car parked on Davids street recently will be given a hearing by the jury.

LAWRENCE, Kas. — Haskell's football opponents may well tremble in fear. One of the candidates for tackle is Frank Miles, an Indian from Pawhuska, Okla., 6 feet 2, and 332 pounds.

NEW YORK — Fannie Hurst, back from abroad, hasn't much of an opinion of American women tourists. In fact she thinks they show less intelligence sometimes than a flock of geese. Geese at least know where they are going, but many American women buy steamship and railroad tickets and think because they are moving they are living. Many go abroad to shop and they may as well stay home and buy things.

THE Dancing Silhouette

BY NATALIE SUMNER LINCOLN

THE WINSLOW MANSION had become a house of mystery. A visitor, an eminent physician, had been murdered. A series of strange events baffle investigators and strangest and most mystifying of all is the eerie shadow of a girl dancing before a garret window at midnight.

COPYRIGHT, D. APPLETON & CO.

CHAPTER 1

The Woman in Blue

FOR the sixteenth time in an hour J. Arnold Winslow completed his tramp around Dupont Circle and sat heavily down on a bench which held a commanding view of the paths bisecting the small public park in the northwest section of Washington, D. C.

For a while he watched the stream of persons crossing the park on their way from office to home, his restless fingers turning his cane this way and that until a final vicious jab brought a subdued grunt from the man seated on the same bench.

"Awfully sorry," Winslow exclaimed, then, getting a full look at the man: "Haven't I seen you before—feeding the birds and the squirrels?"

"Very likely," responded the other. "I drop over here when I can spare the time."

Winslow turned.

"Do you notice people? That is, do you recall seeing a woman in a blue silk dress and a smart black hat? Hang it, that's not much of a description, but when I say she has the figure of a girl of 16 and the face of a woman of 60—a painted Jezebel—"

The man nodded. "I think I know who you mean. She usually comes around in the afternoon and leaves when—the children do."

"Did you see her today?" eagerly.

"Yes."

"Do you know her name—who she is?"

"No. She occasionally asks me the time—and always clears out before 5 o'clock."

"Before 5 o'clock." Winslow repeated the words mechanically and lapsed into silence, then rose with abruptness and, tossing down his newspaper, strode across the park.

The advertising section of the Star lay on the bench directly in his line of vision, and the man had no difficulty in deciphering the advertisement marked by a pencilled cross. With quickened interest he raised his head and watched Winslow cross the street into Connecticut avenue and proceed due north. More leisurely the stranger gained his feet and followed.

The man turned into the entrance of a tall building and mounted the winding staircase to the second floor. Winslow was made aware of his presence by the shadow of his figure across the glass partition of a closed door bearing the legend:

UNIVERSAL DETECTIVE AGENCY, EVIDENCE EXPERTS

G THORNE, General Manager

"Walk in; the office is never closed," and as the latter stepped inside, he led the way to an inner room. "I persume you wish a private interview?"

"With Mr. Thorne, yes"—responded Winslow, recovering somewhat from his surprise at the unexpected appearance of his casual park acquaintance.

"I am he."

"My name's Arnold Winslow. You were recommended to me by Senator Fairchild," he began. "I understand that you are all that your advertisement in the Star says. I'm in trouble, sore trouble."

"So I gather, and what can I do to help?"

"It's a bit hard to begin," Winslow admitted, after a second. "It all seems so trivial—at first." He cleared his throat. "My wife and I are childless, and 20 years ago we adopted my brother's son, John. He could not be more dear to us if he were our own child; therefore when he became—" he hesitated.

"Engaged?" prompted Thorne softly, as the pause lengthened.

"Infatuated!" The word shot from Winslow. "There's nothing else that expresses it; why, Thorne, the girl's a paralytic."

"Indeed?" In his interest, the detective leaned closer. "And what produced that condition? Has she always been so?"

"No." Winslow checked a sigh: "Jack, when motoring across the continent, was driving in Chicago, struck her taxi, overturned it, and Miss Chase's spine was injured, resulting in paralysis of the lower limbs. When Jack came east he was madly in love with Elsa Chase. He talked unceasingly of her perfections, her illness, the tragedy of her helpless condition, and so worked on my wife's and my sympathy that we sent for Elsa."

"What then?"

"She and her nurse came three months ago to our summer home on Cape Cod, and we brought them to Washington with us." Winslow lowered his naturally strident voice. "Elsa is undeniably beautiful, undeniably pathetic in her helplessness—but—but John shan't marry her; no, by God, he shan't!"

"You mean . . ."

"I don't believe in invalids marrying," harshly. "But that's not the only reason. We can learn nothing about the girl, her origin, past life—past associations. Why, man, she's never had a letter, a telegram or any communication from any one since she's been with us."

Thorne considered for a second. "Can you learn nothing from her financial connections?"

"Hasn't any, apparently; she's never asked us to cash a check; but then as our guest, there is no occasion for her to spend money, and a girl in a wheel chair has no particular opportunity for wearing expensive clothes. A few days after our arrival here, I was strolling about the grounds—I live out beyond the country club—and turning a corner came upon Elsa talking to the woman I expected to meet in the park this afternoon."

"What then?"

"The woman left at sight of me and Elsa explained that she had stopped to inquire her way to a convent which is about a mile beyond my house. The absurdity of that type of woman asking for a convent didn't strike me at the moment."

"You say 'that type of woman'; had you time then to classify her?" asked Thorne mildly.

"No; but I've seen her since. Once trying to speak to Elsa in my car on Pennsylvania avenue, and last week we came face to face outside my gate, but again she got away before I could leave my guests and interview her." He turned roughly on the detective: "You've got eyes; you don't have to be told where she belongs."

"Well, see here"—Thorne spoke with some roughness. "Has it ever occurred to you that this unknown woman might be an acquaintance of your son's——"

"Stop right there." Winslow's fist struck the desk heavily. "She isn't." From his pocket he drew out a leather wallet and extracted three pieces of paper. "That woman gave the first one of these to my gardener for me; the others came by mail."

The detective spread each paper on his desk and scanned the fashionable writing on them.

"If you would learn what you should know, come to Dupont circle on Monday at 5 p. m."

The second read: "Why did you not keep your appointment?" And the third: "Your last chance—at 5—Dupont circle—Monday."

Thorne sat back in his chair. "Why didn't you keep your appointment, Mr. Winslow?" he queried, pointing a long forefinger at the second note.

"But I did," impatiently. "I was at the Circe at 5 and she wasn't; the same thing occurred this evening, for, you say the woman really was there?"

"If it was the same person." Thorne picked up each piece of paper and held it to the light; none were water marked, and save for the black ink, were simply strips of paper carefully folded in exact squares. Instead of lowering the papers he held them under his nose.

"Perfumed," agreed Winslow watching him eagerly. "It was stronger when they first came—a very pungent scent."

Thorne opened a drawer and took out a small but heavy glass bottle. "The woman in blue sat on the same bench with me one day last week," he explained. "She made off in a hurry to catch a bus and this bottle dropped unnoticed out of her lap on to the turf. It's half full of perfume, as you see."

"It's the same!" exclaimed Winslow triumphantly. The same perfume and the same woman"

"Possibly," admitted Thorne. "This perfume is called Heavenscent. Now, Mr. Winslow, exactly what do you wish me to do?"

"Find out the connection between this woman and Elsa Chase," promptly. "Also why the former made appointments with me at 5 o'clock and left before the hour set. And——"

"One thing at a time," broke in Thorne. "Answer truthfully—what do you really want?"

"Information that will make any marriage between Jack and Elsa impossible."

"Very well." Thorne's voice sounded oddly in the prolonged silence. He pointed to the three squares of paper. "Let me keep these and, if anything turns up——"

"You will hear from me," Winslow paused on his way out, "pardon the question, Thorne, but are you a foreigner?" observing the latter's swarthy skin and high check bones.

"No, Mr. Winslow. My ancestors on the shores of Plymouth met yours when they landed from the Mayflower." A queer gleam lit the detective's black eyes. "I am an American Indian."

CHAPTER 2

Death Strikes The Doctor

THE sun was setting as Jack Winslow stepped out onto the terrace at Oaklands, his uncle's summer home, and his eyes rested in frank admiration upon the young girl sitting propped up in a wheel chair outside the French windows.

Elsa Chase raised her blue eyes from her embroidery as he approached.

"It's growing too chilly for you out here" Jack chided gently. "Come indoors, dear." And waiting for no remonstrance, he wheeled her chair into the large music room, stopping before the wood fire blazing on the hearth.

"Not too close," Elsa touched the wheels of her chair. "I feel hot and stuffy."

"Stuffy, perhaps," Jack eyed her with concern. "But your hands are cold," noting her fingers' icy touch. "As cold as you treatment of me lately. Ah, Elsa, how have you the heart to play with me as you do?" and dropping on one knee he threw his arm about her.

"Sweetheart — my sweetheart"— he murmured with passionate fervor.

"Always your sweetheart, Jack?" she questioned, a catch in her voice.

"Always—and forever more."

Later, with dinner over, Jack and Elsa returned to the music room, accompanied by Mrs. Winslow.

"Come Elsa, a game of Russian bank," said Mrs. Winslow crisply, drawing a card table toward them. Jack was an interested spectator as the game progressed, with Elsa proving the more expert.

"Dear me," Mrs. Winslow exclaimed, totaling her losses. Can you change a five-dollar bill, Elsa?"

Elsa produced a shabby leather bill folder. In withdrawing some treasury notes she exposed the mica-covered section for holding identification cards, and Mrs. Winslow's eyes lighted on it.

"Oh, you have a driver's permit," she cooed, craning forward in her endeavor to read what was written on the card, but her curiosity went unsatisfied as Elsa closed the bill folder.

"I used to drive a car," she acknowledged. "Here is your change, Mrs. Winslow; surely that is your husband's voice in the hall."

Arnold Winslow came in even as she spoke, bringing with him a stranger to Elsa, but, judging from Mrs. Winslow's cordial greeting, an old friend of the family.

"Elsa," Winslow stopped by her chair. "This is Dr. Kane of Boston," and the girl looked up into a pair of steel gray eyes, as her hand was taken and held in a powerful grip. "Jack," wheeling abruptly on his adopted son, "I promised you would call for Bates and Glover for the party tonight. Is your car in the garage?"

"Yes"; but for a second Jack did not stir and his face held a repellent look.

Elsa became conscious that something was wrong. As the front door closed with a resounding bang upon Jack's retreating figure, Arnold Winslow broke off his animated chatter with Dr. Kane.

"My dear, I have perhaps taken much on myself, but with Jack's interest at heart, you must forgive any blundering on my part."

Winslow cleared his throat. "Jack's happiness is bound up in you," he said. "He desires before all else an early marriage; but— but—"

"But in my crippled state," Elsa's quivering lips barely enunciated the words.

"That's the point," broke in Winslow. "Won't that crippled state yield to expert surgical treatment? I've brought Dr. Kane here to see you."

Elsa, the pupils of her eyes widened to twice their normal size, looked at the three people facing her. "I—I don't quite get your meaning," she faltered.

"It is this," Winslow could be clear and straight to the point when he wished. "Dr. Kane has made some remarkable cures where the spine was injured, resulting in partial paralysis. Your injury was to the spine?"

"Yes," as he paused. "They said it was due to that that I lost the use of my legs."

"Well," Winslow drew a long breath. "Kane, here made the trip from Boston just to see you tonight."

Elsa shrank back in her chair. "Tonight?"

"Tonight." The word was echoed by Dr. Kane and his pleasant voice held a soothing note, inspiring confidence. "I am sure you have had first class medical treatment, but won't you give me a try—for Jack's sake?"

"You will let me?" as she nodded dumbly. "Good."

Winslow wheeled Elsa to her room, where her nurse met them.

"Prepare Miss Chase for an examination, then notify me, here," said Kane, pointing to an old settee which stood across the hall from Elsa's bedroom door.

Nearly two hours elapsed before the elevator once more took Dr. Kane to the second story. Walking slowly along that floor to his bedroom he heard voices coming from the large reception hall.

"Go to bed, Julia, and stop worrying," came Winslow's voice. "Kane will be here soon. I rely on his diagnosis to tell us if Elsa is a cripple or—a fraud."

A burst of loud laughter came from the card room where evidently a game was in progress, drowning out Mrs. Winslow's voice, and Dr. Kane slipped noiselessly into his bedroom.

It was approaching 1 in the morning when those in the card room were silenced by rapping on the long French window opening upon the terrace. Glover, more sober than the others, swung open the window and Ferguson, the gardener, lurched inside.

"Master, master" — his throaty voice sounded oddly in the sudden stillness and Winslow gazed at his white distorted features as if hypnotized. "The man up stairs, master, him you called Kane—he's lying on the ground under his window—dead."

CHAPTER 3

The Coroner Takes a Hand

ARNOLD WINSLOW eyed the undertaker in speechless amazement.

'Do you mean you haven't embalmed the body?" he demanded, covering his breath.

"Just so. The law requires that I have a doctor's certificate . . . ." Payne replied.

"Oh, thats' all right." Winslow's relief was manifest. "McLane will fill out the necessary papers. Dr. Kane lived in Boston; will you arrange to have his body taken there, or shall I?"

"I can," the undertaker answered. "But I don't think you have quite grasped what I have been saying, Mr. Winslow. Dr. McLane has held up the death certificate."

Winslow took a step backward. "What!" he exclaimed. "What's the matter with McLane?"

"Nothing," shortly. "But in case of accidental death . . ." He paused.

"It's a pity you didn't call the coroner at once."

"Dr. McLane is my family physician.' Winslow spoke with some asperity. "I naturally thought of him first. Did you call the coroner?"

"No; Dr. McLane talked to him on the telephone." Payne drew the door to behind him while still speaking. "Why don't you see the doctor? He'll advise you about the technicalities of the case."

Winslow continued to stare blankly at the front door for several seconds after the undertaker's departure, then he turned heavily and walked over to the small telephone stand.

"Can you get Mr. Thorne?" he called, as a sleepy voice answered the operator's ring. "Ask him to come out to Oaklands; Mr. Winslow wishes to see him at once."

Muttering, Winslow selected his overcoat from among several thrown carelessly on a chair and went out of the front door and around the house.

On turning the corner at the rear he stopped abruptly at sight of Jack and a stranger standing gazing up at a second-story window.

"Oh, Dad," Jacked hailed his appearance with a note of relief in his low-pitched voice. "Coroner Penfield wishes to see you."

Winslow advanced with outstretched hand. "I am glad you are here," he said. "I wish that I had kept my wits about me and telephoned for you immediately."

The coroner nodded. "It would have been best," he responded dryly, and his air clearly indicated disapproval. "Your son tells me that you found Dr. Kane here. The body should not have been moved; I cannot understand why McLane permitted it."

"He wasn't here then," explained Winslow. "We were so overcome by the tragedy that none of us thought clearly; our main idea was to get poor Kane indoors and resuscitate him." He paused and glanced in awe at the upper window. "Kane must have died instantly when he struck the ground."

Penfield measured the distance from the window to the ground with his eye, then bowed his head. "A fall from there might break anybody's neck," he agreed. "But come, speculation is idle. Where is the body now?"

"On the lounge in the card room. Coming with us, Jack?"

"I'll join you later," and Jack trudged off down the circular path leading to the big brick and stone garage.

Waiting until the other two were out of sight, the boy retraced his footsteps, but this time, instead of pausing at the spot where he and the coroner had stopped 15 minutes earlier, he continued past the glassed-in loggia, used both as breakfast room and sun parlor, to a window next to it on the first floor.

With a movement almost feverish in its haste, Jack stooped over and swept his hand along the brown turf for a distance of three or more feet. What he sought was not there. He straightened up with reddened face to find Ferguson the gardener returning with a stranger in tow.

"This 'ere gentleman has a 'pintment with your father," explained the gardener.

"My name is Thorne." The detective's pleasant voice was a relief after Ferguson's throaty tones. "Your father," with a quietly appraising look at Jack which missed nothing, telephoned for me to come at once. Can I see him?"

"I—I suppose so," doubtfully. "Will you come this way?" and wasting no words, Jack started for the front of the house. With a hitch at his trousers and a passing glance at the undertaker's assistants, Ferguson followed Jack and the detective, although at a respectful distance.

"Thank God you've come!" ejaculated Winslow. "My guest, the noted surgeon, Paul Kane, accidentally fell out of a second-story window last night and died instantly."

The detective looked at the older man with quickened interest.

"Horrible," he exclaimed. "Is there anything that I can do?"

"Coroner Penfield wants you, Dad," and not waiting for the others Jack hastened to the card room. He was only a second or two ahead of Winslow, whose brief "Come along," proved an invitation not only to Thorne, but to the gardener who trailed behind them.

Both of the Winslows hesitated at sight of the prone figure on the lounge. The room still bore evidence of the game of the night before; playing cards littered the table, poker chips were scattered even on the floor, while decanters and soiled glasses, with a plate of stale sandwiches were on a small end table. As the men drew closer to the still body, Coroner Penfield was the first to break the silence.

"Mr. Winslow," he began, "was Dr. Kane in good health before retiring last night?"

To Be Continued.

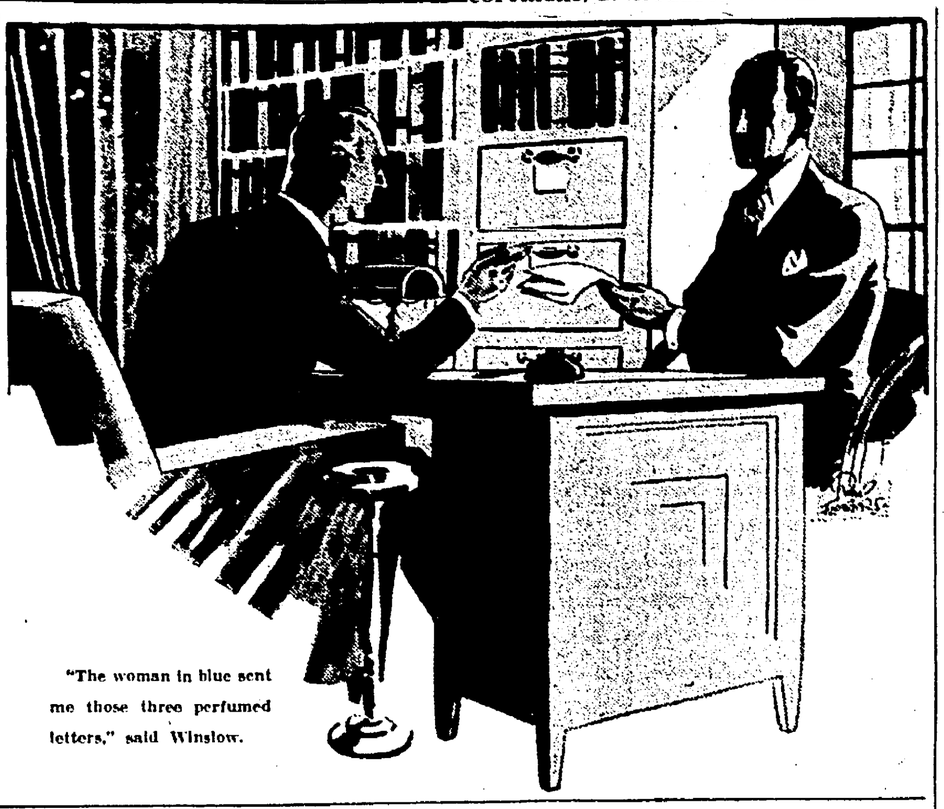
Being funny is the hardest kind of work.



"The woman in blue sent me those three perfumed letters," said Winslow.

"How have you the heart to play with me as you do?" Jack pleaded.

"Was the dead man in good health before retiring?" the coroner asked.

COUNTY FAIR RACES DRAW 150 HORSES

THREE-DAY PROGRAM HAS TEN EVENTS ON FOR TRACK PATRONS

Purses Total $3,500; Thursday Big with Four Races Carded.

Preparations are being made to take care of a record entry list of more than 150 head of horses for the three-day racing program at the Marion county fair starting next Wednesday, Sept. 10. The track has been put into good condition and another rain before the first day of racing will make it lightning fast.

The officials of the speed program have had the track banked a little more on the curves and if enough rain falls in the next week an attempt will probably be made to lower the mile track record for county fair racing in Marion.

Entries have been received by officials in charge from the McMillen, Schamahorn, Brinkerhoff, Peck, Miller and Jones stables which assures fans of some excellent races during the three-day period. Some of the best racers in this part of the country are included in these six stables and practically all of them will be on hand here next Wednesday morning.

The purses for the ten races total $3,500 which constitutes a new high mark for county fair racing programs. Three events are carded for Wednesday and Friday while four events will be run off on Thursday, the big day of the fair. Both the 2:12 pace and the 2:12 trot will be raced on Thursday.

Rodeo Featured

In between the heats of the various races the rodeo which is presenting a program nightly at the fair will entertain the fans. The races start at 1 p. m. each day with H. H. A. rules and three heat plan to govern.

Dr. N. Sifritt will be the presiding judge while Vic Peters of Columbus will be the starter. A. B. Curtis of Wellington has charge of the scorecard privileges and John Luvisi is speed clerk.

Entries for the races close next Saturday. Five horses are necessary to enter and four to start. The schedule of races with the purses follow:

WEDNESDAY, SEPT. 10

2:20 trot $300
2:22 pace $300
Three year-old pace $350

THURSDAY, SEPT. 11

2:12 trot $400
2:12 pace $400
2:24 trot (for horses that have not won $200 in 1930) $300
2:24 pace (for horses that have not won $200 in 1930) $300

FRIDAY, SEPT. 12

Three-year-old trot $350
2:16 pace $400
2:18 trot $400

Ohio Northern Eleven To Tackle Army in 1931

By International News Service

ADA, O., Sept. 4—Ohio Northern university team will meeet the Army eleven September 26 in its first gridiron encounter of the 1931 season, athletic officials of the college announced here today. The game will be the season opener for both teams.

With a host of major opposition stacked against them for the coming grid campaign, about 100 Northern football aspirants have been called for their first practice next week.

Forty men from the 1929 squad will report.

BOWLING FANS TO ORGANIZE FOR YEAR

Steam Shovel League Opens Friday, While Three More Get Started Next Week on Local Alleys.

With one league scheduled to start play this week and three more next week Marion's bowling season finds itself well under way. All the local pin-smashing will take place at the Recreation Bowling Alleys on South Prospect street which are under the supervision of E. W. Kopp for the second straight season.

The league starting play this week is the Steam Shovel loop with eight teams entered. These teams with their complete personnel follow: No. 1—Boyd (Capt.), De Ver, Griffin, Finley and J. W. Smith; No. 2—Kerselring (Capt.), H. Little, Shepherd, Snyder and Ruhl; No. 3—Shrock (Capt.), Fies, Cochran, Williams and Jacobs; No. 4—Heffelfinger (Capt.), R. Snyder, Powell, Benson and Halby; No. 5—J. Fies (Capt.), Jacoby, Taylor, Haldeman and Ward; No. 6—Norris (Capt.), Clark, Williams, Kemmerly and Davidson; No. 7—Rea (Capt.), Ginder, Roberts, Koeppin and Eberl; No. 8—Fox (Capt.), Williams, Little, Roebuck and Clutter.

This league is sponsored by the Steam Shovel Athletic Association and bowls every Friday night. Its season starts Sept. 5 and ends May 8. Harry Fies is president of the league and George Kesselring, secretary. Cash prizes totaling around $200 are awarded at the end of each season.

The three leagues starting play next week are the Erie league on Monday, the All-Star league on Tuesday and the Industrial on Wednesday. The complete lineups of these teams will be published either Saturday or Monday.

Mr. Kopp is disbanding the second Industrial league and is organizing a City league. Any bowler who wishes to become affiliated with a team in this league is asked to attend a meeting which will be held for the purpose of getting the teams lined up tonight at the Recreation Alleys.

There will be some changes in the names of the teams in the All-Star league, the Chrispin Drugs bowling as Wrenn's Garage and King's Lumber as the Serv-U-Wel Grocers.

The Business Women's league will get started the week of Sept. 6, probably on Wednesday night.

CUP FLIGHT OF CLUB CHAMPIONSHIP PLAY NOW IN SEMI-FINALS

Gilmore Hiett and Frank Kette in Finals of Lower Bracket.

Play in the Mar-O-Del golf club championship tournament reached the semi-finals in the cup flight and the finals in the second flight over the holiday period. Gilmore Hiett and Frank Kette have completed 18 holes of their 36-hole final match in the lower flight with the former 4 up. The remaining 18 holes will be played during the rest of this week.

J. Weis, W. A. Corbett, Jack Gompf and R. Raub have reached the semi-final round of the cup flight.

Weis defeated C. Rowley, five and four, Corbett sank W. A. Morrison, three and two; Gompf defeated F. Eberl, three and two, and Raub defeated Johnstone, one up to reach the semi-final round. Weis meets Corbett and Gompf plays Raubto decide who plays for the club championship.

To reach the finals Hiett defeated Minard in the second round, three and one and then beat F. Steffen in the semis, five and three. Kette vanquished H. Askew in the second round, one up and eliminated F. Sage in the semi-finals, by the same score. Steffen defeated A. W. Kette in the second round, by default while Sage was eliminating Scheib, four and two.

In the tournament between Richwood members of the club V. Zuspan defeated F. Cramer in the 18-hole finals, one up yesterday. Cramer eliminated Wall in the semi-finals, one up while Zuspan was beating McCoy by the same margin.

First round results saw Cramer beating Siddle, eight and seven; Wall defeating J. Zuspan, four and three; McCoy beating Hostetter, four and three; and V. Zuspan trimming Howe, three and one.

JOLSON BUYS HORSE

By The Associated Press

NEW YORK, Sept. 4—Al Jolson, the comedian, who was said to have made a "killing" playing the races this season, once again is a horse owner. He bought Kildare from C. W. Leonard of the Newtondale stable yesterday at Belmont Park for a price said to be $10,000.

RAILROADERS CAN'T SEEM TO GET BACK INTO CLOUTING FORM

Church Champions Top All Series Teams in Hitting; Erie Batting .234.

BY BOB ELLIOTT

For the simple reason that they're hitting while the Roundhouse team isn't we're picking Calvary to edge the railroaders in the fifth Little World series tilt today at Lincoln. Defeat means eliminatoin for either team and consequently the Erie outfit will be fighting hard to beat back the church team onslaught. The Roundhouse team has one advantage in that Gruber, the Calvary hurler, tossed a hard eight-inning fray only Tuesday and he may not be in the best of shape.

However, we're banking on the Calvary hitting power that has clouted out 29 hits so far in the series to give them the victory. The Erie nine, supposedly the hardest hitting team in the series is batting a weak 234 and unless something radical happens they're not due to change enough to make any difference against Gruber.

Will He Start?

The mention of Gruber brings up the question of whether or not Calvary might not start Lyle Messenger. Gruber's fast ball will be better suited to the Roundhouse clouters than Lyle's slow floater and the latter may be on the mound when the fray gets under way. Shoemaker is almost a sure starter for Erie and Calvary should pound him for quite a few hits.

In glancing over the two lineups Calvary seems to have a distinct edge. We award them five positions of the nine with two even and two going to Erie. Razz Young is better offensively and defensively than A. L. Hinklin while Gruber is easily a better hitter than Shoemaker and, if he's right, a much better pitcher.

Joe Lang's hitting will rank him ahead of Willie Baldauf. Lang is one of the most dangerous hitters in the Erie lineup and is apt to break up a ball game at any stage of the game.

We class Bob Gibson and Lusch even at second but give Jerry Niemeyer an edge over Hosey Williams at third on their hitting performances. Williams has failed to hit safely in eight trials while Jerry has done a little better. Due to his batting, which has been the sensation of the series so far, Flash Baldauf takes a slight edge over Sammy Sharrock. Sammy's fielding ability helps even this up but not quite enough to give him an edge.

Outfields Even

The outfields we'd rank as even with Robbins taking an edge over Midlam and C. Messenger a little ahead of Wilson. We've rated Glen Price and Myron Gibson even in left, Gibson's fielding overcoming Price's advantage gained by his hitting.

However, these margins are so close that a break one way or the other may decide the game so we wouldn't be a bit surprised if Roundhouse was playing Lee Street in the final games next week.

MUGGSY TO RULE GIANTS FOR TIME

By The Associated Press

NEW YORK, Sept. 4—John J. McGraw, generally given credit for transforming New York from a joke city in the major leagues to one of the best baseball cities in the country, will be at the helm of the Giants for at least five more years.

McGraw put his name on a contract yesterday and thus quieted all rumors that the man, who has been in charge of the Giants since 1903 and is a stockholder and vice president of the club, would not be back next year and the years to follow. McGraw's present contract expires at the close of this season but Charles A. Stoneham, president of the club, and McGraw reached an agreement six months ago. The signing yesterday was merely a formality.

CHRISTIANS SHOVED BACK TO MONDAY LEAGUE BY JUNIORS

Epworth Nine Cops Five-inning Fray for Cellar Championship, 10 to 2.

In a game that seemed slow and listless compared to the thrill-packed Little World Series contests of the past two weeks, Epworth Juniors emerged triumphant in their cellar championship with Central Christians last evening at Lincoln Park, winning 10 to 2 in a five-inning fray shortened by darkness.

As a result of the defeat the Christians amble along the path trod by Wesley last season to the No. 2 league while the Methodists still remain in the faster company of Calvary, Epworth No. 1, St. Mary's, Baptists, etc. Lee Street, by virtue of winning the No. 2 loop, comes up to play with the so-called tougher boys and from the way they're going in the World Series they'll probably be anything but welcome.

Mautz Stars

The tilt last evening was won mainly because a person by the name of Eddie Mautz was doing some good or rather effective hurling for the Epworth nine and was carrying a bat loaded with T. N. T. He drove out a single and double and drew a walk in his three trips to the platter, scoring twice. He gave up only four hits to the losers, three of which were bunched with two errors to score two runs in the fourth and fifth frames.

Roscoe Rank's wildness was extremely costly, the six bases on balls he gave up, figuring in the scoring all through the game. Three of the men he walked later scored while none of Mautz' five free tickets affected the Christian scoring in any way.

The M. E.'s opened the scoring activities in the third when Cram walked after Kirkpatrick had fanned. Roush singled into left, Cram taking third. Henry grounded out, Cram scoring. Fishers' single to center tallied Roush. They continued their antics in the fourth with three scores and in the fifth with five.

Mautz' double, a walk to Christman, Vanderhoff's single and Cram's sacrifice scored the three in the fourth. The final five came when the entire Methodist team batted around. Four hits, two walks and a sacrifice bunt did the dirty work there.

Score In Fourth

Christians scored first in the fourth when Yazel doubled and Fisher's mussed up Hinze's bounder. Three men were left stranded when Ward went down swinging; for the third out. The second and final Christian score came on two infield hits by H. Geissler and Rife and a bad throw by Cram who tried to force Geissler at third on Yazel's bounder to the infield.

Hitting honors were shared by Mautz, Johnny Rife, and Marion Vanderhoff. The latter collected the longest extra-base smash of the game, a long triple to deep center that Rife got to but couldn't hold. He also got a single. He scored twice and batted in another score. Rife got two singles but didn't participate in the scoring.

Forest Lawn Noses Out First Reformed, 2 to 1

First Reformed and Forest Lawn battled through six torrid innings yesterday at Garfield with the latter winning, 2 to 1. Neither team scored or collected a hit until the sixth. The winners got one long blow while the losers got one more.

Not a single ball was hit to the outfield by either team until the sixth frame when both pitchers weakened a trifle.

Again Spit is a horrid word, but it is worse on the end of your cigar

...the war against spitting is a crusade of decency . . . join it. Smoke CERTIFIED CREMO!

The strong arm of the law halts the spitter whose vile and vicious habit menaces his fellow citizens. But for every spitter caught hundreds escape... hundreds who still roll cigars with dirty fingers and spit on the ends! In fact, more than half of all cigars made in this country are made by hand, and therefore subject to the risk of spit!

Certified Cremo protects you against this abomination! Every tobacco leaf entering the clean, sunny Certified Cremo factories is scientifically treated by methods recommended by the United States Department of Agriculture. And its purity is safeguarded along every step of the way by amazing inventions that foil, wrap and tip the cigars without the possibility of spit!

Try a Certified Cremo—see how wonderfully good it is! Made of the choicest, tenderest leaves that the crop affords, we claim Certified Cremo's quality is tastier than that of any other cigar. Don't let its 5c price stand in your way. Your physician has in mind a cigar like Certified Cremo when he recommends a mild smoke in place of heavy brands.

winning 5 to 3 in the opener but collapsing in the tea tilt in the eighth inning as the Braves scored eight runs and snatched it, 11 to 7.

The turn in the lane finally came for the Yankees, who beat Sad Sam Jones and the Senators, 10 to 7. Babe Ruth didn't hit a four-baser but whaled a thumping three-sacker which a speedier player would have turned into a homer. Dickey got a homer and two triples for the Yanks.

Jim Moore, up from the Texas league, sank a homer in the fourth inning after his double in the third brought in three runs for the A's, the Athletics knocking over the Red Sox, 11 to 4. Grove did not finish, but was credited with his twenty-third win.

QUESTION OF WEIGHT REMOVED BY TOMMY

Cleveland Welter Scales 145 Day Before Scrap; Is Confident.

By The Associated Press

CLEVELAND, O., Sept. 4—Tommy Freeman has brushed aside any doubt about his ability to make the weight when he climbs into the ring tomorrow night to bid for the welterweight championship newly acquired by Young Jack Thompson, the California negro.

Freeman's followers had been anxious about his weight, but the Clevelander weighed in yesterday at 145 pounds, two under the limit and was pronounced on fighting edge.

As for Thompson, who will defend his title for the first time since he took it away from Jackie Field, he said "there's nothing to worry about. It's just a fight, and I've been in a lot of 'em."

The champion, however, will be out to avenge himself for the trimming he took at Freeman's hands at Detroit a year ago. The bout is for 15 rounds.

School Health Service To Be Increased By Dr. N. Sifritt

Red Cross To Aid in Regular Examinations

Health Commissioner Announces Plans at Meeting of City Board; Prevention of Disease To Be Aim Under New Plan for Students.

A larger and more complete health program will be worked out in Marion public schools this year than ever before, through cooperation of the offices of Dr. N. Sifritt, health commissioner, and Superintendent George A. Bowman and the combined city and Red Cross nursing service in charge of Miss Florence Spaulding. That was revealed at the monthly meeting of the city board of health in its offices in the courthouse yesterday afternoon.

Announcement of a campaign to prevent contagion among school children was announced to the board by Dr. Sifritt, who has obtained the support of Superintendent Bowman in the proposed health program.

To Watch Symptoms

Hygiene, sanitation and proper treatment of diseases in their early stages were held out by Health Commissioner Sifritt as more desirable than use of medicine or other treatment after the disease had once been contracted. The proposed health work provides for a regular weekly visit with teachers and principals in all schools in the city, in which teachers may discuss health promotion and lay before the nurse any problems. In this work, all children with any traces or symptoms of any ailment would be examined by a nurse. Regular visits to the schools would also assure cooperation of teachers in noting and reporting suspicious symptoms.

Another phase of the enlarged health program may call for a periodical inspection of pupils in all city schools. This could be done briefly, and would guard against the inception of any contagion, as pupils showing any traces or symptoms of a contagious disease would be isolated.

Previously, little work of this nature was done in local schools, with most attention being concentrated on clinics which centered their activities around physical defects of children, and their correction. Although this work is considered valuable by Dr. Sifritt, the prevention of contagious diseases is considered the greatest health problem in school health work by the commissioner.

Students in local schools were formerly given close examination for symptoms of diseases only after a mild epidemic of smallpox had gripped the schools and held dozens absent during a period of nearly seven months.

Use of shallow wells as a source of water supply for drinking purposes was warned against yesterday by Dr. Sifritt, after reporting on the test of water samples from five such wells during the last month. Such wells are liable to contamination from various sources, and are a health menace, according to Dr. Sifritt.

Makes 60 Investigations

In his report for August activities, Dr. Sifritt noted 60 general investigation calls and conferences, and reported no cases of contagious diseases being discovered in the city in August.

The bacteria count in samples of milk sold in the city represents an improvement from similar tests made last month, according to Dr. J. T. Gruber, milk and food inspector. In no instance was the bacteria count considered dangerously high.

Upon inspecting one local meat market last month, Dr. Gruber discovered 800 pounds of unsatisfactory meat prepared for market. It was destroyed.

Orders to remedy 95 unsanitary conditions in the city were issued by C. M. Tobin, sanitary policeman, in August, his report shows. A total of 105 investigation calls were given attention.

Report of Miss Mabel Hastings, city health nurse, on the activities of the city and Red Cross nurses showed 428 visits had been made by the nurses in August.

Rube Bloom, well-known composer, will be the featured artist on the new En-ar-co Motor Oil Program over station WTAM on Thursday, Sept. 4, at 6:30.

Mr. Bloom will play his own composition "Soliloquy." He is best known for his "Song of the Bayou," a song which won second prize in the Victor Phonograph Contest. Mr. Bloom plays the piano and gives a special interpretation to his own compositions.

Ben Selvin's Columbia Recording Orchestra of 14 pieces have a way of their own of playing dance music. This well-known orchestra has never before appeared on a radio program of this type.

Irvin Kaufman, tenor, has been making records for over twenty yers and has sung for Victor, Columbia, Okeh and fifteen other recording companies. Mr. Kaufman has a rich tenor voice and is an old friend to the radio audience. He has sung on chain programs

The White Rose Male quartet are noted for their original and pleasing arrangement of songs and for their versatility.

Compositions with the general topic of "Work" will comprise the Mid-Week Federation Hymn Sing anticipating Labor Day when a mixed quartet broadcasts over WEAF network Thursday at 6 p. m. This program is sponsored by the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America.

Artists to be heard include Muriel Savage, soprano; Helen Janke, contralto; Clyde Dengler, tenor, and Arthur Billings Hunt, baritone and director.

The Maxwell House Ensemble, an orchestra and male quartet, under the direction of Willard Robison, will present a program dedicated to the nations' youth going back to school during the broadcast to be heard over WJZ network, Thursday at 8:30 o'clock.

Lafayette, who personified France's aid to our country during the Revolutionary war, will be the re-incarnated guest of honor at the Arco Birthday Party to be broadcast through WEAF network Thursday at 8 p. m.

How Dr. Waterhouse, leading physician of Malone and Franklin county during the War of 1812, saved his town from British occupancy and thus kept the American troops in command of that strategic town will be recalled in a playlet during the Niagara-Hudson Program over WEAF network Thursday at 6:30 p. m.

An amateur experimenter with the mysterious force of electricity, Dr. Waterhouse, built an instrument that was the forerunner of the storage battery. When the British invaded the town, the physician was able to put his hobby to a most practical and patriotic use.

RUBE BLOOM

This well known and popular composer will broadcast a series of his own compositions over Station WTAM tonight at 6:30 p. m. Mr. Bloom plays the piano and gives a special interpretation of his compositions.

Vincent Lopez To Celebrate Radio Birthday

To celebrate the ninth anniversary of the week when Vincent Lopez first went on the air, Frances Williams, beautiful blond "blues" singer of George White's "Scandals" and other musical shows, will assist Lopez in a gala radio birthday program which WLW will broadcast from the roof garden of the Hotel Gibson on Thursday, at 10 p. m.

Miss Williams will come to the birthday party between shows at the Albee theater where she is playing a vaudeville engagement this week. She will sing "blue" songs of the type that have made her famous on the stage, on records, and most recently on the radio. However, she is one of the last of the stage stars to consent to sing on the air, having limited her appearances to once with the Fleischman program and once on the Camel hour.

William Stoess, musical director of the Crosley stations, will conduct the Lopez orchestra for one number in the 10 o'clock program and will present entertainers from his staff who also will help Lopez with his celebration. Included will be Jane Froman, contralto; Virginia Karns, soprano; Jack Brooks and Don Rose, harmony team who left night clubs for radio; and Salt and Peanuts who have just come to WLW from vaudeville.

The first radio anniversary of Jack Frost's Melody Moments will be celebrated in a request program when they broadcast over a WEAF network Thursday at 8:30 p. m.

Eugene Ormandy, director of the orchestra, will play Boldi's "Chanson Bohemienne" at a violin solo. Lois Bennett, soprno, and Oliver Smith, tenor, will be heard in solos and will join in singing Herbert's "Sweethearts."

Selections from current Broadway musical shows will be played by the Knox-Dunlap Orchestra during the broadcast to be heard over WJZ network, Thursday September 4, at 5:00 o'clock.

• • •

The "Dutch Patrol," a fantasia of two Netherland airs, by Albert Stoessel, will be played by Ludwig Laurier and his Slumber Music ensemble during the broadcast to be heard over WJZ network, Thursday at 10:00 o'clock.

SPRINGFIELD MAN TO SUCCEED RENSCH

William Roberts Becomes Machine Shop Instructor in Harding High School.

William Roberts, formerly in the Springfield school system, has taken over the position of Clyde H. Rensch, now of Galion, as machine shop instructor at Harding High school. His regular classes will begin with the opening of school next week, although he has been in the summer vocational shop at the high school since July. In Springfield he was in the automotive department of a Springfield vocational school.

Before going to Springfield, Mr. Roberts started the machine shop in South High school at Lima and was there for three years.

The Stars Say—

For Friday, September 5

ALTHOUGH the lunar configuration for this day points to lively and unexpected opportunities and change, yet the mutual figures are found to hold a note of mutually malevolent and disturbing conditions. These show disruptive and disintegrating forces suddenly precipitating positions of stress and peril, radically affecting the finances and probably endangering the physical well-being as well. It would be wise to be on guard against all manner of loss and abrupt visitation in business as well as personal affairs. Shun loans and borrowing also.

Those whose birthday it is may be prepared for a year of change which may hold some unexpected benefit, but at the same time they may be beset with unforseen losses or physical peril. It would be well to arm against disintegrating forces and to safeguard the property against loss by loans or treachery. Violence, injury or enmity may be precipitated by uncontrolled or impulsive conduct.

A child born on this day may be ingenious, original and adventurous, but it may incline to rash, impetuous and headstrong actions, which may prove the means of self-undoing unless these be disciplined in infancy.

JOHN J. FRANCIS,

STOCKS FALL AFTER RALLY

Early Selling Wave Fails To Keep Prices on Level with Yesterday.

BY W. S. COUSINS
I. N. S. Financial Editor

NEW YORK, Sept. 4—Wednesday's closing selling wave reappeared in the early trading in the stock market today and after reaching slightly higher price levels the bulk of the active stocks were again carried downward. Discouraging dividend action by a large number of industrial corporations, together with the refusal of the outside public to come into the market, were the principal arguments of the bears in their efforts to unsettle prices.

Radio was again under fire and sold under 39 in fairly large volume. Southern Railway lost 3 points at its. Fractional losses were recorded in a dozen or more of the leaders, but a good part of the lost ground was recovered in the second hour. Bethlehem Steel was again the strong spot in the industrial, forging ahead to 87¾ on rumors of a possible amicable settlement of the Youngstown merger controversy. Good buying was also evidence in General Motors, which also turned over actively at 45½. United Aircraft staged a "demonstration" with the help of the latest spectacular accomplishments of the airplane, and rose about 3 points to 47½.

Cotton and grain were fairly steady. September wheat at Chicago duplicated the year's low at 82¾ cents a bushel while cotton rose about 10 points. Call money was in good supply at 2½ per cent.

Red Cross Organization To Aid Stricken Farmers

By International News Service

WASHINGTON, Sept. 4—Farmers in drouth-stricken sections who cannot provide the necessary security for private or governmental loans will have to look to the Red Cross or similar organizations for relief.

This was made plain today by Secretary of Agriculture Hyde, as head of the federal drouth-relief organizations.

All plans thus far reported to him from dry states for relief of farmers contemplate securing of loans through the federal intermediate credit bank organization or local sources. Good security will be required for all loans.

WHEAT PRICES IN SLIGHT GAIN

Scattered Buying Causes Market To Advance Fractionally.

By The Associated Press

CHICAGO, Sept. 4—Wheat had a better undertone at the start of trading today and early sales were about steady with yesterday's close. Scattered buying later caused prices to advance fractionally on all deliveries. Corn was slightly easier because of commission house selling. Opening ⅜c lower to ¼c higher, wheat afterward rallied a little, and then steadied. Corn started ⅛@⅜c lower, but subsequently rallied slightly.

Wheat traders were heartened today by advices from a British semi-official source saying Europe was expected to require 116,000,000 bushels more wheat this season than last. Countries outside of Europe were expected to need 16,000,000 bushels less wheat than a year ago. World shipments for the season ending July 31, 1931, were estimated at approximately 736,000,000 bushels. The report also said Russia and Balkan countries appeared to have good quantities of wheat which they desired to sell at prices below the world's parity.

Russian exports of wheat were expected to total 48,000 bushels and the total of the Balkan countries were placed at 44,000,000 bushels.

Another discouraging factor was the report that flour production in the United States for the four weeks ending Sept. 3, declined 103,748 barrels. The total this year for that period was 6,620,376 barrels compared with 6,784,324 barrels in the same period last year. There was little news to disturb corn. Trade was light. Oats and rye followed the trend of other grains.

Provisions were in demand and a little stronger.

LODGE HOLDS PICNIC

Contests featured the annual picnic held by the Red Men's lodge and their families Sunday in the lodge hall on East Church street. Covers were placed for 50 at a basket dinner. Awards in contests were won by Mrs. Earl Harriman, T. C. Clay, Lloyd Strawser, Jack Harriman, Carl Flinchbaugh, Mrs. Geddis Harriman, Ralph Wilcox, Mrs. Carl Flinchbaugh, Mrs. Carl Koenig, Miss Grace Koenig, William Dudley. Honors in euchre were won by Mrs. Frank Layton and George Lower. The next annual picnic will be held in August at the home of Mr. and Mrs. George Lower two and one-half miles east of LaRue.

SPICER TAKEN HOME

LA RUE, Sept. 4——Frank Spicer, Democratic nominee for county commissioner, yesterday was taken to his home here from Antonio hospital at Kenton. He sustained a broken leg several weeks ago while harvesting soy beans on his farm south of here.

ERROR IN COUNT

Through an error in counting, the number of teachers in Marion county this year, exclusive of city schools, was listed at 65 in Wednesday's issue of The Star. The correct number of teachers in the county, including Supt. C. B. Rayburn, is 140

CHURCH SENDS PARTY TO BUCYRUS MEETING

Delegation from Prospect Street M. E. Attends Conference Session.

A party of members of the Prospect Street M. E. church was in Bucyrus last night attending the Central German Methodist Episcopal conference. Rev. Charles E. Severinghaus presided as chairman of the session which dealt with "Bethesda Hospital and Our Children's Home in Berea, O."

Those attending from Marion were Mr. and Mrs. Fred P. Haas and children, Mrs. Catherine Schweinfurth, Mrs. Earl Midlam, Mrs. Clara Holland, Mr. and Mrs. August Schrader, Mr. and Mrs. John Reidenbaugh, Mrs. Frank Mayer, Mrs. Caroline Shambaugh, Mrs. Ferd Hecker, Mrs. Mary Hecker and Misses Elizabeth Ruth and Martha Haas.

The question of the merger of the Central German and English M. E. conferences will be brought up early in the Friday morning session.

ANOTHER CASE WHERE KONJOLA "MADE GOOD"

Cleveland Resident Wants Everyone To Know What New Medicine Did For Him.

MR. CHARLES H. JESSUP

"I commenced taking Konjola about a year ago," said Mr. Charles H. Jessup, 1908 East 65th street, Cleveland. "I was so ill that I had to sit in a chair for I could not breathe lying down. From December to March I was unable to work. Whatever I ate caused misery, I lost weight and was very weak. I have taken eight bottles of Konjola and today I am sound as a dollar. I can walk ten miles without fatigue. I shall always have Konjola in my home for it certainly proved to be a master-medicine in my case. I am sleeping fine, have regained my lost weight, and my nerves are calm. My work is now a pleasure for I am enjoying the best of health."

The records of Konjola fairly overflow with just such happy endorsements. Once Konjola is put to work, results are prompt and sure. However it is best that six to eight bottles be taken in average cases.

Konjola is sold in Marion, O., at Stump & Sams Pharmacy and by all the best druggists in all towns throughout this entire section. — Adv.

It costs too much NOT to PAINT

A GOOD protective coat of LOWE BROTHERS DERBY RED Barn Paint on barns and outbuildings will save you many times the cost of repairs. It withstands the ravages of sun, rain, sleet and snow. It is made double thick. One gallon of Derby Red and one gallon of good linseed oil make two gallons of good paint ready for use.

Its spreading and lasting qualities make it a most economical paint. Compare the value of Derby Red with other similarly priced paints.

Derby Red is suitable for use on barns, silos, fences and metal roofs.
